VANITIES PLEASE AT GRAND OPERA HOUSE

Presenting Two Musical Comedies—The Singing and Dancing Good.

The Winter Garden Vanities, presenting "The Department Store" and "Count Molecky," again pleased a good-sized audience at the Grand Opera House last night. In the "Department Store," Moe Parker as the new clerk, and J. Taylor as the porter, brought roars of laughter from the audience with their funny sayings and actions. Bob Cook, as the owner, and Flo Marsh as the customer, were at their best. The chorus scored another triumph with their dancing and singing.
Count Molecky was a decided hit. Flo Marsh as Lady Lamar was anxious to marry a count and Bob Cook, as Jack Bull, who was trying to arrange a match, missed the real count and paid Moe Parker to impersonate him. James Taylor, as the waiter, seemed to never run out of his funny sayings and jokes, and kept the audience in high spirits. When all arrangements were made for the wedding, the clergyman (P. Hauff) turned out to be a detective and the count and Jack Bull were arrested.
The vaudeville throughout the performance is of high calibre and pleased the audience very much. Ivy Rochester, with her dancing and singing, was good, and Dot Wheeler and Betty Smith danced the tango with gracefulness and ease and brought rounds of applause.
The Winter Garden Vanities will present the same comedies to-night and those who appreciate a good show for a moderate price should not miss this chance.

MANUFACTURE OF SHOES.

An Interesting Address Given by Edgar Lockett.

On Monday evening, Edgar Lockett, of the Lockett shoe store, was the special speaker at the weekly meeting of the Y' Club. F. B. Pense presided. Ernest Madrand, chairman of the musical committee, was in charge of the singing. Mrs. R. H. Ward and Mrs. Wilson provided the supper.

Mr. Lockett, who has spent considerable time in the large shoe manufacturing concerns across the border, gave an excellent address on the subject of the manufacture of shoes. Mr. Lockett traced the manufacture of the shoe from the time that shoemaker would go from place to place in country and make shoes for the whole family. He told of the different stages through which the shoe passes before it is ready to go on the foot.

The making of leather was explained in detail by the speaker. Mr. Lockett described some of the machines used in the large shoe industries. He stated that at the present time the greater part of the shoes worn by the Canadian people are made in Canada, which was certainly a great thing for this country, as it gave so much employment.
A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Lockett on motion of Ken Wood and B. I. England.
