Flogglaze

The Finish that Endures

A PAINT THAT GIVES GREATER SERVICE

25% Better Painting 25% Greater Paint Value

Flogglaze EXTERIOR covers 500 square feet, two coats to the gallon, or 25% more than any other paint. It has 25% better covering and will last 25% longer. Here is the reason why:

The above diagram illustrates the faults of brush marks in lead and oil paint, and other mixed paints. Points A are weak spots in the film. Points B indicate where an excess of paint gives only surface drying, leaving a soft centre and producing surface cracking. Dirt and destructive fungi collect in the dales at points C, giving a dirty appearance and early destruction of the film. Light does not reflect a good gloss from such a rough surface. Too much paint is piled up at points D, which lessens its covering capacity.

The above diagram illustrates a typical Flogglaze Exterior Surface. There are no weak hollows to destroy the film. Its self-leveling qualities produce a level, unbroken surface. There are no brush marks. Dirt and fungi cannot collect to mar or destroy the film. Light is evenly reflected, giving a glossy enamel finish on both interior and exterior surfaces. It can also be seen that the length of the zig-zag line from X to Y in diagram No. 1 is much greater than the length of the line X to Y in diagram No. 2, which plainly illustrates why FLOGGLAZE EXTERIOR actually covers from 20% to 25% more surface than any paint made with ordinary raw linseed oil.

There Is a Flogglaze Line for Every Purpose

- Exterior Paint for inside and outside Painting.
- Porch and Veranda Paint for interior and exterior floors.
- Velvet Finish for interior wall and ceiling decoration.
- Lac Shades for furniture, woodwork and floors.
- Auto Finishes and General Purpose Enamels

MORE HUMORS OF HISTORY

A.D. 1157.—Thomas a Becket was appointed Chancellor. He outshone the King in the magnificence of his retinue, and the incident of Henry plucking the rich cloak from Becket's shoulders and giving it to a beggar was probably a sly intimation. In 1162 Henry, for the purpose of checking the growing power of the Church, appointed Becket Archbishop of Canterbury.
