LOOKING AROUND

If it is true that many Canadians are going to the United States, and getting work, they are ousting Americans from jobs, for labor conditions in the States are little better than in Canada. It is a great compliment to Canadians that they are able to go abroad and take jobs from the native born across the border.

The Amherst Island fishermen are reported as having pulled up their nets owing to the scarcity of fish in the waters up there. The islanders apparently do not look for a miracle that would fill their nets, and yet who knows but what the fish may return to their old haunts!

Why do not the Women's Institutes of Frontenac do as the Leeds' Institutes have done and give a supper to the Frontenac county councillors in order to show the reeve of Wolfe Island and his associates what real cooking is. The ladies still have a chance to demonstrate their ability, and the county councillors are no doubt ready to act as judges.

Pamphlet advertising alone is not sufficient to tell the tourists what Kingston has to offer them. Newspapers far afield must be utilized. When the late Capt. Daniel Noonan ran his steamers on the Rideau route between Kingston and Ottawa, he advertised in American newspapers and also had a connection with large railway companies across the line. The result was that he drew tourists from all over the continent. Kingston must spend some money to advertise itself, and it must do it systematically.

Some day Kingston may have all its milk supply pasteurized, for milk so treated is the only safe kind. It cannot be said, however, that bottled milk is safer than milk sold by the measure. The city council some years ago was convinced that it was "fifty-fifty" in regard to the arguments in favor of bottled and unbottled milk. Instances were given where milk was sold in dirty bottles, and it was shown that many bottles came out of houses where there was disease; so the council decided that "measure milk" was as safe as "bottled milk" under the conditions existing.

Across the border, leading classical teachers are advocating the study of Latin as a means of increasing accuracy in spelling and understanding English. There is nothing new in this, for when we were grammar school boys we learned that a study of Latin and French was necessary to really understand English. Over half the words in the English language are of Latin origin. Some of Kingston's octogenarians, who attended private schools here in their youth, still tell with pride of being taught the Latin roots when they were under ten years of age. Thus they mastered English words which they otherwise would have known little about. These old private schools of Kingston turned out scholars.

A specialist announces that if a business or professional man cannot hold his breath for thirty seconds after taking a long breath, he should see a doctor. Most people today neglect to practise deep breathing, which strengthens the lungs. It would be said that if there was more deep breathing exercise done, there would be less lung trouble.

Kingston's upper fire hall, which the chief declares to be one of the best in Canada, was once the Primitive Methodist church edifice—and it is also on Brock street, where two churches are now out of commission. Lately, horses were stabled in the old church building, but now the place is motorized, like the old M.E. church. Kingston's fire brigade has always kept the station neat and bright. The place is certainly a credit to Kingston as a fire hall.

How different it is in British Columbia! There, people who move in the best society and are even good churchgoers are bootleggers. The announcement made in the House of Commons at Ottawa will surely be pleasing to members of the bootlegging profession in Kingston.

Death Of a Summer Visitor.
At Alexandria Bay, N.Y., word has been received of the death at Catskill, N.Y., of Mrs. Matilda Langdon Hayden, widow of William B. Hayden, who for more than four years was an island resident. Death occurred Wednesday after Mrs. Hayden had been ill a long time. She was eighty-four years old. Some forty-five years ago William B. Hayden and his brother, Charles H., bought Fairland, an island near Wellesey Island. They came to the Bay every summer after that and were prominent in all of the social activities. Both were prominent bankers and made millions in that business, in the leather business and other industries. A son, W. Langdon Hayden, is rear commodore of the Thousand Island Yacht Club.

INDUCTION AT PICTON

Of Rev. W. M. Fee As Pastor of St. Andrew's Church.
Picton, June 24.—There was a large attendance at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church Tuesday evening, June 23rd, when Rev. W. M. Fee, B.A., was inducted into the charge of St. Andrew's church.

Rev. R. A. Cranston, B.A., Trenton, had charge of the service, and gave an eloquent and inspiring address. He appealed to the people to be true to their ancestry, true to themselves and true to God.

Rev. R. J. Craig, clerk of Kingston presbytery, who has been moderator of St. Andrew's session during the vacancy, spoke of the unanimous call extended to Mr. Fee. The induction service was conducted by Mr. Cranston. Rev. W. G. Richardson, B.A., Deseronto, gave advice and counsel to the congregation, asking for sympathetic and prayerful co-operation of the entire congregation to Mr. Fee. Mr. Richardson predicted a wonderful future for St. Andrew's as he knew of the great success Mr. Fee had always had in former charges. Mr. Richardson also spoke of the great advancement made by St. Andrew's church during recent years.

SERVED HALF A CENTURY.

Miss Louise Coleman Honored by People of Lyn.

Lyn, June 23.—A pleasant evening was spent in the school room of the Methodist church, Lyn, on June 19th, when several members of the congregation assembled, having as their guest-of-honor Miss Louise Coleman. After singing the hymn, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," and a few fitting words from the chairman, Rev. F. G. Robinson, Miss Coleman was called forward and Mrs. M. Cornell read and presented to her an address which referred to her long term as organist. For over fifty years she has served in this church in that capacity, never failing in faithfulness to duty, rendering of her talent in church services of all descriptions with a sympathy and harmony ever to be remembered with gratitude. George Jones then presented Miss Coleman with a purse of gold.

A great number of the ladies and gentlemen present added their measure of praise, some of these short speeches being reminiscent of half a century ago, when Miss Coleman first assumed her responsible post.

It is felt that her services have been unique, as it is seldom indeed that one organist renders music in the same church for half a century. Miss Coleman thanked those present in her own quiet, unassuming manner, speaking of how her heart had been in the work and dwelling on her gratitude to God for His gift of health and strength to carry on for so long.
