"THE HOSPITAL AND COMMUNITY SERVICE"

Mr. Armstrong Advances Suggestions for Solution of Kingston Problems.

tenac Hotel on Monday. His subject | Cooke's church. was "The Hospital and Community Service," and besides supplying interesting hospital facts his interesting remarks showed the trend of policy of modern hospital administration, along with suggestions regarding the solution of problems affecting the local institution.

The hospital played a big part in the community, said Mr. Armstrong. One of every ten persons used it, and undoubtedly more should avail themselves of its services. It should be able to serve all parties. There were three classes in the community-the poor and charity, the man of moderate means and the well-to-do. Thanks to the assistance of the state, the poor were well looked after, and the rich could afford to pay, but the man of moderate means, who was really the backbone of the country, was obliged by his circumstances to forego hospital advantages. How to enable the latter to get his share was one of the biggest problems in hospital administration to-day, said the

The problem was becoming more difficult. Mr. Armstrong | quoted from government reports to show that the expenses of operating a hospital had doubled in the past few years. In 1905 the average cost per patient per day at the K.G.H. was 79 cents, in 1923 it was $2.51.

Better Service Demanded. Reasons were numerous. The cost of living had advanced. The public was demauding better service nowadays. The hospital needed more nurses accordingly, and the new clinic building will increase such administration expense. But the great reason was the advance in medical science, requiring more elaborate and costly equipment. The use of the X-ray had grown and in a short time the local board would face the question of purchasing a deep therapy set for the treatment of cancer etc. The introduction of insulin alone had increased the expense dieting and foods. Out-patient work had developed and nearly the who floor of the new clinic building would be given over to such. The hospital board may attempt co-operation with the local dentists to have a regular dentist available there. There seemed little chance of reducing the daily cost. The average for Ontario was $3.19 and that for the K.G.H. was not much under $3. Seeing that the local hospital receives about ninety cents for its poor patients, it was easy to understand deficit of $80,000. If these cases could be lessened in number, there would be some relief. There were supposed charity cases which were not so, but the hospital had not the machinery to find out. Perhaps an arrangement would be made with the city in this matter. The problem of collections was a serious one. ronto hospitals demanded weekly payments in advance, but the method here was not so drastic. Still a real basis of reasonably prompt payment should be worked out.

By cutting down on the lost in curred through its poor and non-paying patients, the hospital could render better service to the man of mod-

Just before "The King," Kiwanian H. C. Nickle described the new tourist camp at Lake Ontario Park. It was delighting the visitors and encouraging some of them to stay for a whole week, a sufficient answer to those critics who had said that it was too far off the travelled highway and that the tourists would not buy in Kingston. One man had described it as the best in the province. In this connection Kiwanian F. S. S. Quite An Experience. The story is being told of a thrilling experience of a well-known Kingston man, his wife and a friend. They were returning from Brophy's Point Sunday night in a motor boat. The wind was high when they started and when they got as far as Barriefield it blew so hard that they decided to land. They managed to get the boat to a whart and the friend jumped off to get the rope but the boat drifted out again and the others could not land. They went down farther and at last succeeded in landing at another wharf. The friend was not to be found so the man and his wife walked to Kingston. The friend decided it was too dark to walk back to Kingston so he slept in the woods all night.

Presented with Automobile. As a token of their appreciation of his recent decision not to leave from Philadelphia, officers and congregation of the Church of St. James the Apostle presented the Rev. Canon Allan P. Shatford with an automobile and illuminated address. Canon Shatford preached in George's, Kingston, last month.
