Speaking of Figures.
The Certified Public Accountants they say
Never go to the shore on vacation for they
Need a rest from their work and the beaches, You see,
Are so covered with the figures, what changes would that be!

Stepping Out.
Geraldine: "Jack knows all the latest steps, doesn't he?"
Mac: "Yes, he's my step daddy."
—Gertrude.

The Real Facts.
Dressen: "So Channing lost his money on fast horses?"
Huber: "No, he lost his money on the slow ones."

The courtesy of the olden days has quite departed.
Recently a man told a woman he would love her as long as he lived—and then went and shot himself!

Ho Throw It.
Hackett: "I can trace my ancestors back 500 years. All of them were eminent and many were of the nobility."
Simpson: "You've got a fine line!"
—Samuel B. Samuels.

THE TRAPROCK MUSEUM OF UN-NATURAL HISTORY.

By Dr. Walter E. Traprock.

Our Nautical Department.
My intense interest in travel has led me to collect a great amount of material having to do with sea voyages, ships, etc.

One of the prizes of this department is my model of the great 46-horse-power galley built for Lambrinus II of Mesopotamia in 2364 B.C. When Mesopotamia was an inland sea, the country went dry in 1254 and now look at the darn thing!

Near this exhibit is an original Viking ship with its ancient sail woven from the bears of these marvelous mariners. This wry beard-cloth was used extensively by the Norsemen—and nothing delighted them more than when the howling north wind blew through their whiskers.

On a sheepskin, just above the Viking ship, is the first known copy of the "rules of the road" as applied to navigation. The master-mariner was supposed to hold it in his hand before changing his course and it was against the rules to anchor within a cable's length of a lighthouse.

Other objects of interest are two pieces of kindling wood from the ships log carried by Lelf Ericson and the instruments, sextant, quadrant and hydant, used by him. Notice also the fine color-samples of water from the Red, Black, and Yellow Seas, the Blue Danube, and the Green River.
No collection of marine relics in the world is more complete than that of the Traprock Museum.

THE SOCIAL PRIMER.

(Summer Resort Series)

I. The Farmer's Wife.
This is the Farmer's cheer-ful wife Who leads a quiet, peace-ful life With naught to do but sleep and work.

For sum-mer board-ers, like a Turk. She is a cle-er cook, for she Quite of-ten serves them fric-a-see. In mak-ing this dish she ex-cels And thus her tough old roos-ter's sells!

II. The Ultra Bathing Girl.
This maid-on thinks she is a peach, And so she doth pa-rade the beach In cos-tumes so wild, short and thin The cops are forced to run her in. And that was what she want-ed, see? She gets some no-to-r-i-ety. Her win-ter's sav-ings thus she's spent To make the Sun-day sup-ple-ment!
—Joan Liebeskind.

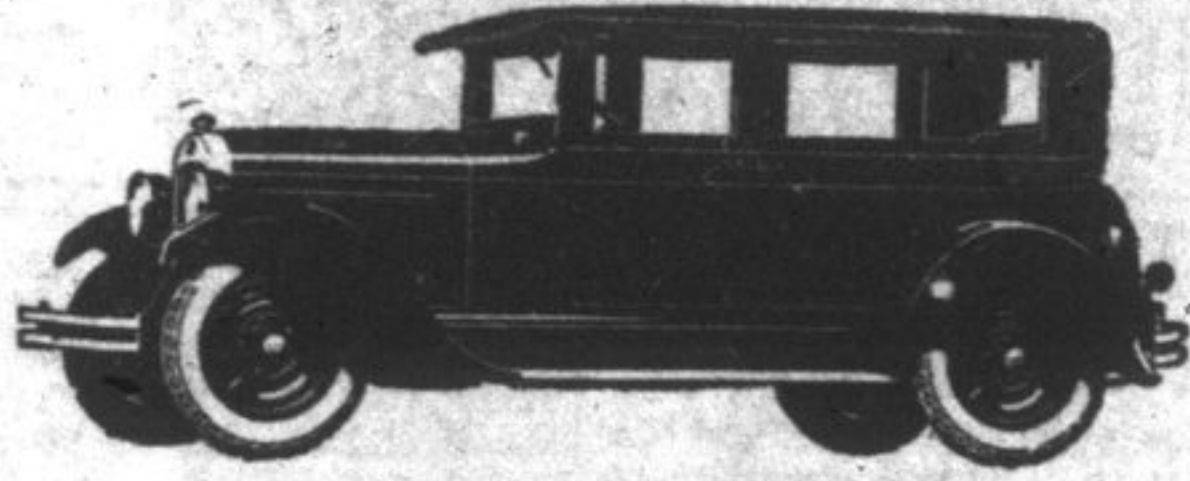

No Speed.
"Young Grigsby is a trifle slow, isn't he?"
"A trifle, and then some. Why, that boy is just learning to play Mah Jong. By the time he gets around to Cross-Word puzzles, there won't be anyone else using the dictionary."
—Hal. R. Costello.
