GANANOQUE

July 6.—A pretty house wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Louch, Sydenham street, Saturday evening last when their only daughter, Edith, became the bride of Dr. Guthrie, Brooklyn. Rev. Mr. Perry performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate members of the family. Miss Louch, who is a graduate of the Methodist Episcopal Hospital of Brooklyn, has been in Brooklyn for the past few years, though she was educated in the town schools where she was always popular among her schoolmates, all of whom will extend to her their best wishes. J. Muchmore, Pontiac, joined his wife here on Saturday and will spend the next few weeks here with friends.

Mrs. Palmer, Watertown, and Mrs. Flood, Kingston, spent the week-end here with their sister, Mrs. John McDonald, Brock street. Miss Daisy Worth, Brooklyn, arrived here yesterday to spend a few Gananouque can breathe easy again. Her brave defenders returned from camp at Petawawa last night. Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Austin, Toronto, spent the week-end here. Rev. Principal Dyde of Queen's is to preach the anniversary sermons next Sunday in St. Andrew's church.

Professor and Mrs. Stevens of Glenridge, N.J., have arrived to spend the next couple of months at their summer home near Sugar Island. Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Byers and little daughter are spending a week on the Rideau near Westport.

Charles Hilliard and Frank LaQue, New Britain, Conn., motored here on Saturday to spend the next week at "Idylwild."

Dr. F. J. O'Connor, Mrs. O'Connor and children and Mr. and Mrs. C. J. O'Connor motored down yesterday and spent the day with friends.

Mrs. John Gibson and son, Dr. William Gibson, Brooklyn, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Gibson yesterday.

Miss Alice and Ernie Grattan, Miss Isabel Duggan, "Buster" Grattan and R. Auger, Ottawa, are spending the next few weeks at Tremont Lodge.

Miss Florence Lindner, Hartford, Conn., is at Hay Island House for a week. The Gananouque-Clayton ferry has had all the business it could handle for the past few days. Large numbers of Americans who crossed here were en route to the back lakes in pursuit of the fanny tribe, fishing being particularly good in this vicinity at the present time.

Miss Margaret Brennan and Rebecca Calow were at "Cragsmere" over the week-end.

Miss May Bishop and Miss Josephine Butler, Brooklyn, are visiting the former's mother, Mrs. D. Bishop, Garden street.

Miss Mary LaQue, who has been attending the Brockville Business College, arrived home yesterday to spend the holidays.

Misses Bressman, Mrs. Fred Kincaid and Miss Gallagher, Brockville, motored up yesterday and spent a few hours with friends.

The "Ganoacks" play a return game in Kingston on Tuesday evening with the Y.M.C.A. team, and those who are interested in a good snappy demonstration of soft ball as played by ladies will motor to Kingston Tuesday evening.

HELD A PICNIC.

The Sunbury Sunday School Children Enjoyed Outing Sunbury, July 3.—The weather has become much warmer and will improve the pastures and grain. The Union Sunday school held its picnic in Thomas Campbell's grove, on July 1st. Many sports were engaged in which included a soft ball game between Inverary girls and Sunbury. The visiting team winning by a score of 8-5.

Miss Inez Slack, Lansdowne, is visiting her friend, Eileen Marshall, Miss Nellie Taylor, teacher, Greenfield, is spending a few days with her niece Mrs. William Cooper, en route to her former home in Southampton, Ont., where she will spend her vacation.

A few from here attended the social at Latimer, on Wednesday evening, also Sand Hill, on Thursday evening. The Gananouque choir, from Grace church, took the service on Sunday evening last and gave us a real musical treat. The large crowd that assembled appreciated it very much and all hope for a visit from them next year.

A large number from here intend going to Watertown, N.Y., for the celebration on the 11th. The pupils who tried the entrance from here are anxiously waiting for the results. A number from here attended the funeral of the late Archie McKendry on Sunday last.

Passed Dominion Council. B. Webster, Lansdowne, was successful in the June examinations of the Dominion Medical Council. Queen's was not represented in the examinations of this or the Ontario Council with its usual quota, because there was no graduating class as a result of the change from the five to the six year course.

THAT YEAR OF FREEDOM BY MILDRED BARBOUR

TROUBLE IN BUNCHES
More than a little vexed at Madame Polinska's high-handedness in taking her car without permission and keeping it for so long without explanation, Nan ordered a taxi and went to her music lesson.

"I was still warm, although the trees wore the colors that herald the approach of fall. The flowers in the parks were putting out their most luxuriant blooms—the last flare of the summer, and the air had that indescribable, mellow fragrance of a season in its full maturity.

Nan wanted to drive to the country after her lesson. She had been so long without her car, due to Madame Polinska's negligent driving, that now that it was running again, she wanted to use it for a pilgrimage from city streets. She determined to speak to the Russian woman firmly on her return and come to a definite arrangement about the use of the car.

She was so busy during her lesson, but so was Brandon. His good-looking face wore a black frown and he was sharp with her when she made mistakes. Mona Vail was not present. Nan wondered if they had quarrelled and if that accounted for his ill humor.

"You'll have to practice more, Miss Farrady," he told her at the end of the lesson. "You've slipped a little these last few times. What's the matter? Too much posing for Danforth?"

"No," she shook her head wonderingly. "My sittings for Mr. Danforth never interfere with my practice. I work in the mornings, as you told me to, and remember, you also told me not to strain my voice with too long practice."

"Well, you'll have to do something," he responded irritably. "I can't let you slide back after you showed so much promise. I'm planning some concerts for the fall and I counted on giving you some actual concert experience but you'll have to pick up if we're to go through with it."

"I'll try," she promised meekly, feeling that this was not at all a happy day.

Just as she was leaving the studio, Brandon's phone rang. He answered it with an abruptness quite different from his usual suave, careless self. When he caught the sound of the voice at the other end of the wire, she heard him mutter impatiently.

In the corridor, Danforth hailed her. "Don't think I'm asking you to pose this hot afternoon, but just come in and take a look at your portrait. I've been painting in the background all morning and it's a corker."

"An artist must eat—though few of us do. I don't paint for the fun of it, dear lady, even though it's my only joy in life. Yes, I've done a wonderful thing there." He squinted at his canvas critically through his heavy lenses. "I've succeeded in making you as beautiful as you are. Even Mrs. Vail had to admit that, although it almost choked her."

"Ah, she came to see the portrait?" Nan inquired.

"Well—Louis dragged her, if you want me to be truthful. But she couldn't very well refuse to admire it. It hurt her to have to do it. She and Louis had a fine row over it—and over you incidentally."

"Over me?" gasped Nan, amazed.

"She thinks he's trying to flirt with you," Danforth wagged his big head sagely. "He flirts with all of 'em you know."

"How absurd of Mrs. Vail," shrugged Nan. "I never even talk to Mr. Brandon except about lessons."

"A jealous woman can find a love message in an inquiry about the price of potatoes," Danforth told her. "Mona Vail is primitive as far as Louis is concerned. She'll fight like a jungle cat and just about as fairly."

Nan went home, more depressed than ever. So it was because of Mona Vail that Brandon was in such a bad temper, and she herself was unwittingly the cause of it. She recalled the discouraging things Brandon had told her about her voice. She hoped that Mrs. Vail's enmity was not going to force her to cancel her lessons and put just that much of a setback on her career.

When she arrived home, the servant who admitted her informed her that a gentleman was waiting in the drawing room. He had asked for Madame Polinska, but since the latter had not yet returned, he begged to speak with the young lady.

Nan went in to meet the stranger, sensing trouble.

It certainly was not a pleasant day!

PICNIC AT STOCCO.

Held by St. Edmund's Church Was a Fine Success. Twoed, July 4.—The popular annual picnic of St. Edmund's church, Stocco, was held on Dominion Day, was again a fine success. A sports programme, two sumptuous meals, music throughout the afternoon provided by the Twoed Novelty orchestra, and a dance in the evening at the new parish hall provided an excellent day's entertainment.

A visitor to the picnic was Charles A. Hanna, M.P., Belleville, who finally consented to giving a short address in which he dwelt on the meaning of confederation and Dominion Day. Mrs. Hanna and his family accompanied him.

The initiative of those who organized the picnic is characteristic of the spirit pervading all St. Edmund's parish. In order to have everything in keeping with the grand stone church building, the oldest in the district, a handsome presbytery has been built and furnished second to none in the province.
