NO TIME THESE DAYS TO BE NEIGHBORLY

Modern Hurry and Whirl Eliminating Much That Is Worth While.

No longer do we find neighbors and friends paying each other frequent friendly calls. The day of such visits appears to be over. People living adjacent to each other often go weeks, even months at a time, without seeing each other until they meet by chance on the street. Then a conversation similar to this ensues, "Why, Nell, I haven't seen you in ages. Why don't you run in some time? So much has happened since I saw you last," and a recitation of all the social activities for the past month, the household cares and housecleaning worries are then recounted at length.

The friends part, each promising to "run in" some day real soon. Yes, she will bring the baby and spend the afternoon chatting, just like the good old days. But does the visit ever materialize. Scarcely ever, says "Janet."

How do you account for the change? Are friends less cordial or can people live without the society of a large circle of friends and acquaintances? The answer is probably due to the growth of cities and towns and increased number of amusements and sports afforded the present generation.

Not many years ago each little community was isolated from the rest of the world, more or less. The sphere of the inhabitants was narrow and limited. Church was a place where young and old alike congregated on Sunday, lingering after the service to exchange ideas, to glean the latest news in the village and to learn of the few happenings from the outside world that drifted in. Evenings were long, monotonous and often unbearable if neighbors did not congregate at various homes, whiling away the peaceful hours in chatting, playing cards and singing. Life then was simple, and it did not take much to make people happy. Not being aware of the great opportunities afforded the residents of the cities, no one coveted what his neighbor had and few lived beyond their means. If anyone was taken sick, the neighbors were called in to nurse the patient, to care for the rest of the family and all sent dutifully and called to learn of the progress being made toward his recovery and to offer their services.

But the cry to-day is that no one has time to be neighborly. The spirit is willing and the intentions of all are the best ever, but time is never available to treat friends and neighbors with the attention and respect due them. Women find their mornings more than filled with household duties, the afternoons with shopping, clubs, parties and matinees, while the evenings are portioned off a few minutes to lectures, a hurried call to a charity bazaar and finally winding up at a party or dance with a few hours snatched some time between midnight and dawn for sleep. The whirl continues, day after day, with no relaxation, until nerves are at the breaking point and health ebbs away. The doctor is called, the patient is hurried to a quiet sanitarium or healthful resort and even the residents next door are unaware that anyone was ill or that the busy routine is not going on just as it did the day before. If one is unable to keep up the pace and is forced to drop out, others are still continuing with the grind and the vacancy is not noticed.

There are apparently no isolated districts any more. Most villages are near a city or connected to a real live wideawake town by excellent roads, by fast express, by air-mail service, by telephone, by radio and by newspapers. The theatres, tennis courts, golf links, bowling alleys, men's clubs, gymnasiums and swimming tank of the village are just small editions of the same facilities afforded the city dwellers.

If people have more ways than enough to fill their time, to amuse themselves and to claim their attention, it is no wonder that it is friends who are neglected. If a return to the society of friends and neighbors is desired, then clubs, amusements and outside demands will have to be done away. There are not a few who feel certain that the world will realize the folly of such a rushed manner of living.

Heart Failed Him.
 Mr. and Mrs. Earl Oscar Ready, Brockville, were sorely bereaved on Saturday in the death of their only son, William Thomas Arnold, who passed away at the General hospital where he had been admitted for an operation for the removal of adenoids and tonsils, the boy succumbing through heart failure. He was born at Crosby seven years ago and had resided in Brockville for the past three years.

Rev. L. S. Wight, B.A., Tweed, the newly appointed pastor of Holyway Street United church, Belleville, was well received on Sunday.

SUGAR USED AS SNUFF.

Is Said To Be A Cure for Catarrh and Colds.

If, during the next few days, you should see a man place his hand near his nose and sniff a fine white powder, it will not be a sure sign that he is what is known as a "snow-bird," or morphine addict. It is more than likely that he has been consulting an osteopathic physician and has decided to take the "sugar cure" for catarrh.

Dr. J. D. Edwards, St. Louis, told the American Osteopathic Association at Toronto that powdered sugar is very good, both for acute head colds, and chronic catarrh.

"Sugar cures the head as you would a ham," he said. "Sugar has been definitely proved to have three valuable features in this connection. First, it kills germs in the presence of excess moisture, as proved by its use in preserving fruits. Second, it has a hygroscopic action, which means that it has a drying effect on the tissues with which it comes in contact. Third, it is nutritional, for physiological experiment has positively shown that the tissues of the nose will digest substances just as those of the stomach do."

Those who follow his suggestions, Dr. Edwards declared, carry their powder in a little box and sniff it at intervals.

Must Pay $57,000.
 New York, July 3.—Pols Negri, Polish film star, will have to pay Uncle Sam $57,000 for her carelessness in neglecting to notify the customs authority on her recent return from abroad that she was bringing into this country two diamond and emerald bracelets valued at $57,000, and a 30-carat diamond ring worth $20,000.

HURT IN THE DROP.

Flying Boat Dives Into River As She Descends With Passengers.

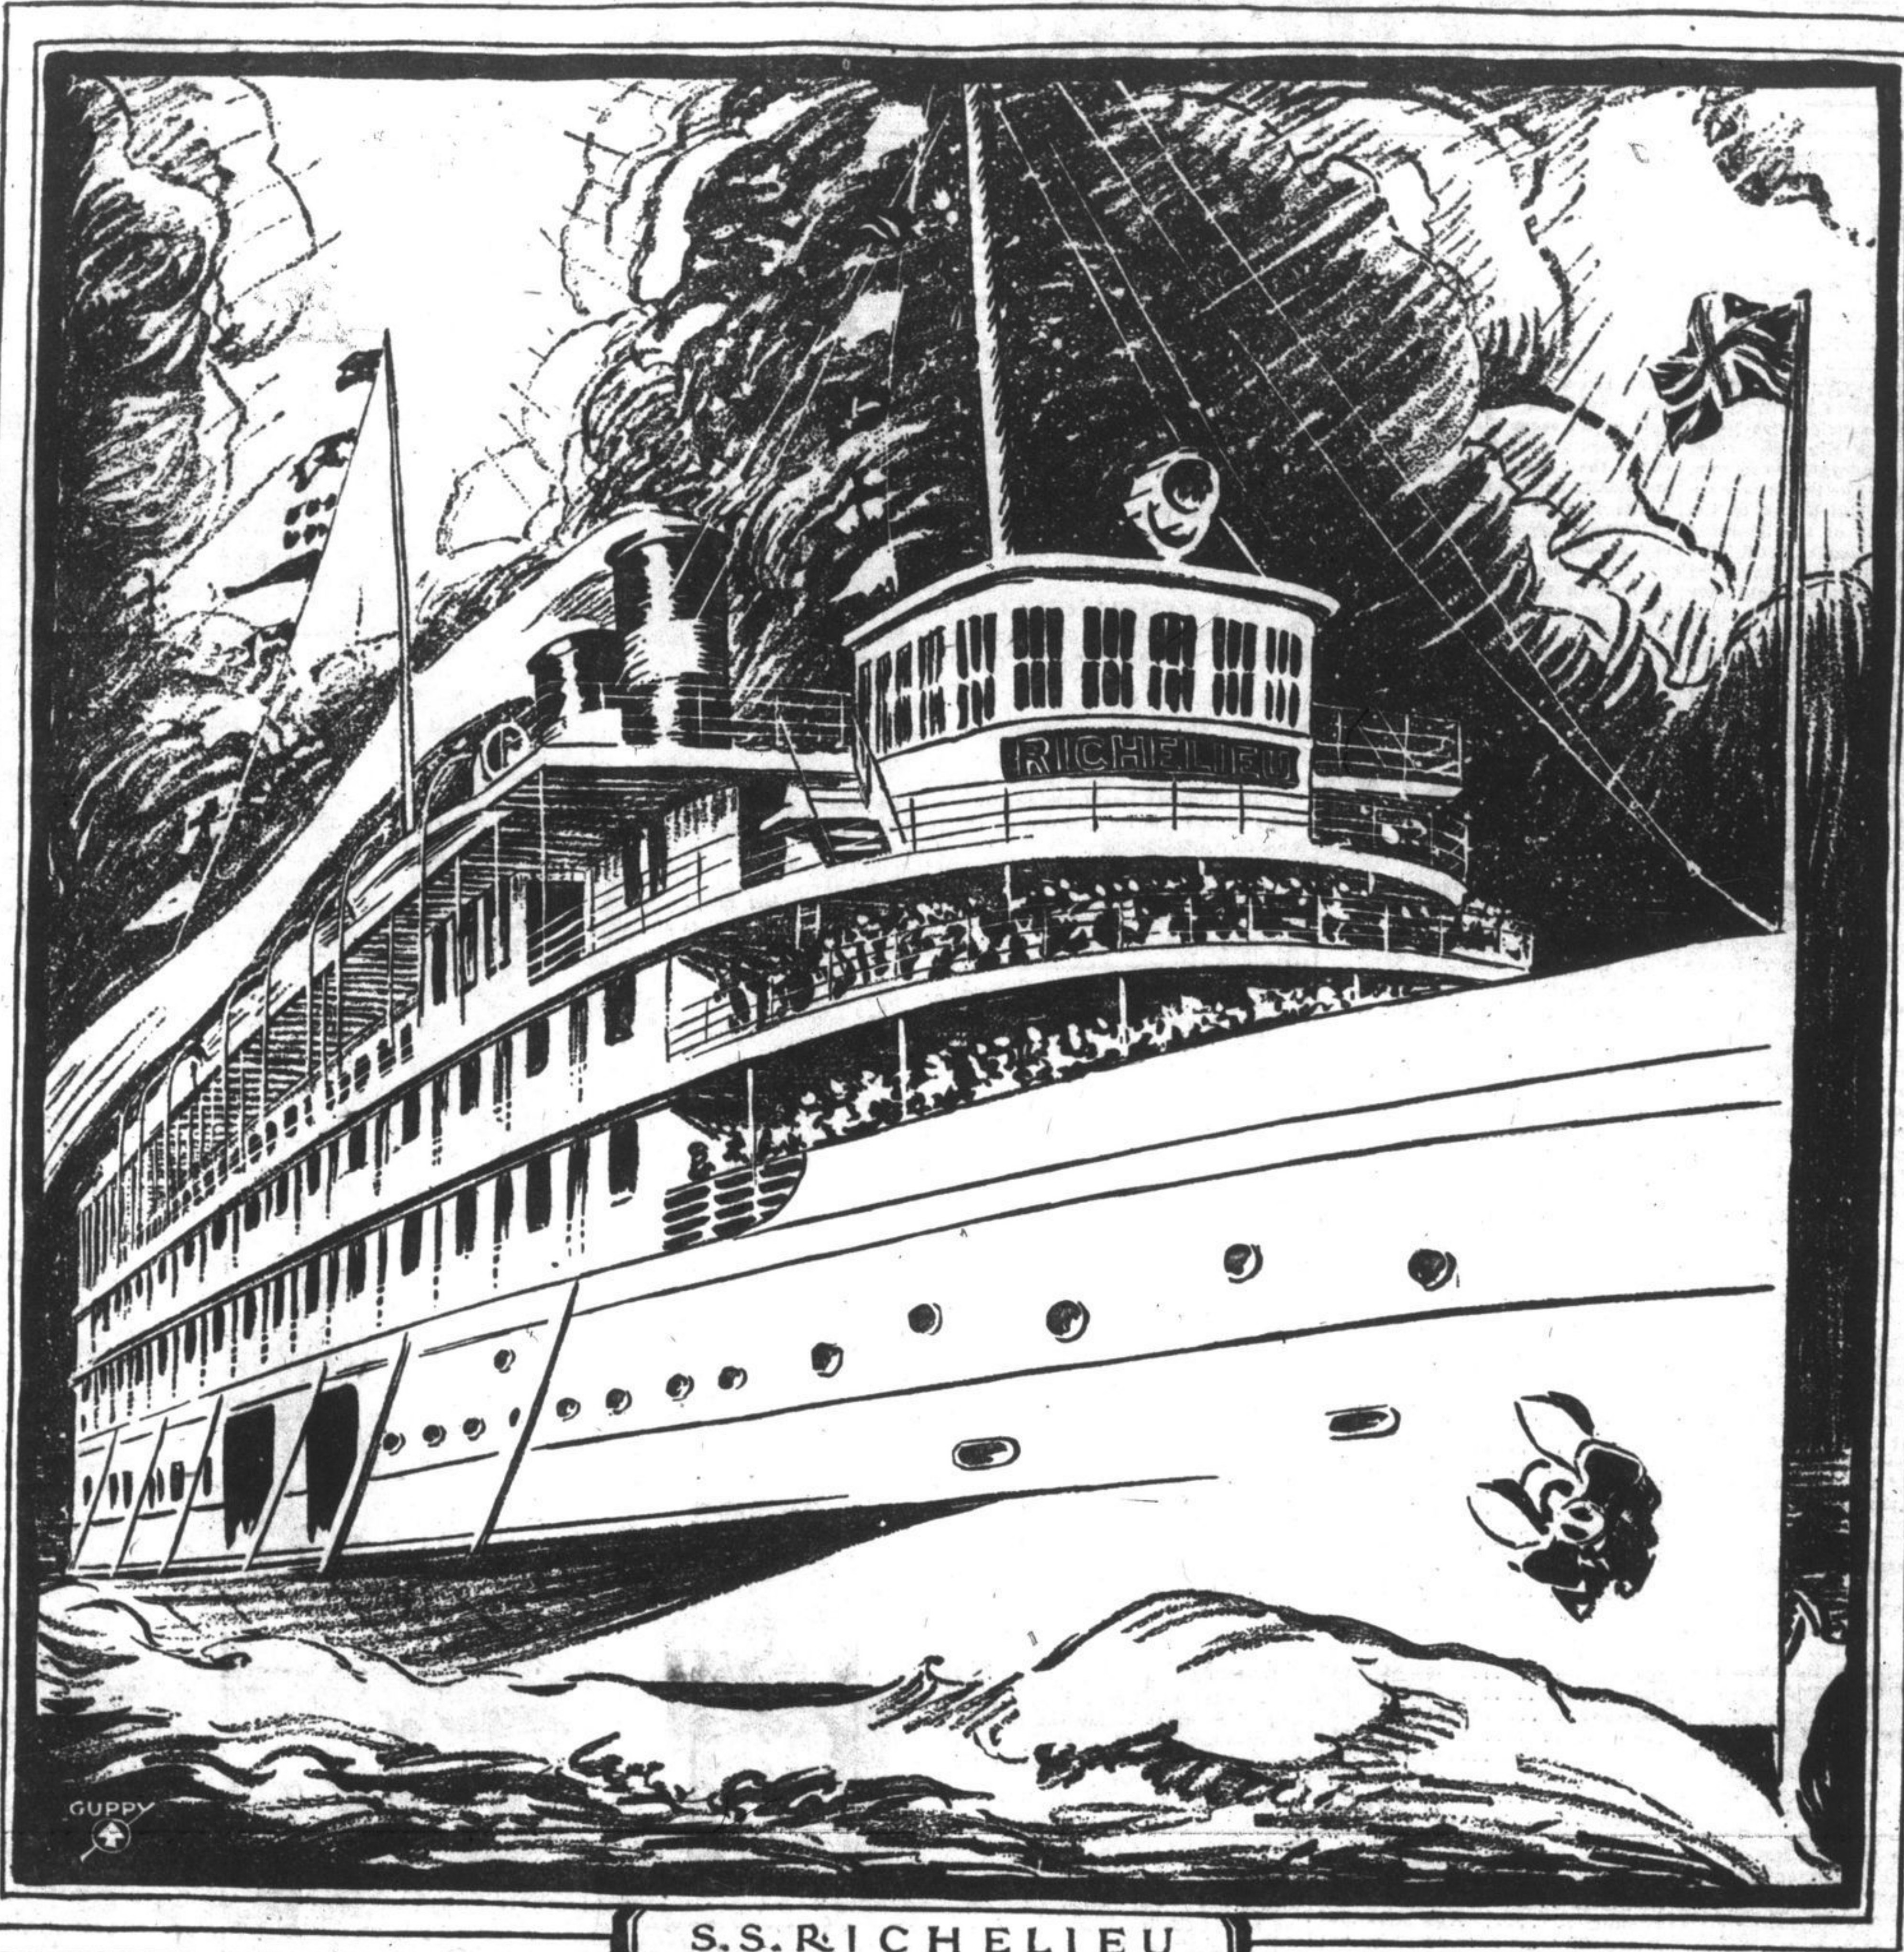

Alexandria Bay, N.Y., July 3.—Charles F. Viley, Orange, N.J., is in a critical condition and Mrs. Viley is improving from serious injuries at the House of the Good Samaritan, Watertown, as the result of an accident Monday in the St. Lawrence river off Alexandria Bay to a seaplane piloted by Captain I. H. V. Shebat, Syracuse, engaged in passenger carrying over the Thousand Islands.

The plane nose-dived when about 30 feet above the river while descending. The pilot disengaged himself and with Captain Jared Massey, who brought his boat to the rescue, extricated the two passengers from the wrecked cabin, which was rapidly filling with water. They were hurried to the wharf and given first aid. Flying glass from the cabin windows cut them severely.

Choose Advertised Products.
 Big bargains are never big enough to successfully act as a life preserver for the business which misses fire on quality and service. Advertised products have got to be good to win out. That's why it is a sane policy to choose advertised products and quick turnover for your green back twins.—Ren Mulford, Jr.

Mrs. Sarah M. Black, widow of the late Henry Black, passed away on July 5th, at the residence of her niece, Mrs. E. C. Adams, Rodmansville. Mrs. Black was born in Prince Edward county eighty-four years ago and lived there most of her life. American chemists have discovered an electrical process by which fabrics can be covered with a thin layer of leak proof rubber.

LINERS OF THE SAINT LAWRENCE

WHERE once Cartier's adventurous barque bore the Lilies of France, in the quest for far Cathay, now plough the magnificent ships of the Canada Steamship Lines.

Past the sombre glory of Trinity and Eternity, guardian capes of the mysterious Saguenay; past Quebec, Mother of Canada, dreaming behind gray walls; past quiet habitant villages; past France's last stronghold in her Empire of the North—Montreal, city of a million, Paris of America, go the great liners of the Saint Lawrence, their decks thronged with happy pleasure seekers.

A unique national heritage, this King of Waters—the Saint Lawrence. A mighty highway of commerce leading from the sea to the heart of the continent, a highway that passes through a land of beauty, history and promise. Thousands of Canada's sons have been inspired with pride and confidence—thousands of visitors have been impressed with Canada's greatness, borne over the broad waters of the Saint Lawrence by the vessels of the Canada Steamship Lines.
