TO DROP RED TAPE IN SETTLING CANADA

Sir Henry Thornton Announces Agreement With C.P.R. and Government.

Fort William, Ont., July 28 .- Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railway and large party of his officials spent a large part of Monday here on their way west.

In an address following a luncheon at Chippawa Park, Sir Henry announced that the government, the Canadian National and the Canadian Pacific had entered into an arrangement to dispense with a great deal of the formality and red tape attendant on the ushering into this country of settlers from the British Isles and the United States. Sir Henry believed that the year to come would see a great acceleration of immigration as a result and that prosperity would be enhanced through greater development. In fact, he declared, development was the only road to national prosperity.

Built of iron and shaped to hold the human form, it was plentifully supplied with spikes pointing inwards, and being in two parts, pressure could be applied by turning certain screws. As an instrument of torture and for bringing about the ultimate demise of the victim it was an admirable creation. To-day there is an Iron Maiden crushing the life out of business and strangling industry just as surely as the instrument of family who live on last year's income instead of next year's." In comparison the proverbs of the East pale into significance in present day application. Every inducement is held out to the householder to buy, regardless of his ability to pay. The instalment plan is a pitfall for the unwary. The credit system is a very costly one to both buyer and seller. How many people realize the cost of carrying the accounts of an average

An idea may be gotten by taking the total of the accounts and computing the interest at three per cent This is only a portion of the cost There are the uncollectable debts, of which every merchant has a surfeit, to be taken care of. Again there are salaries of a clerical staff to look after these accounts.

The consumer pays for it all in higher prices. For the merchant is a very necessary distributor and he must live. He has a capital, and in many cases all he is worth invested in the business and he must protect his property and get his living. There are two kinds of credit.

On legitimate credit rests the whole fabric of business organization of the world. Money, in the form of gold and banknotes, is only a token of that credit. The ability to produce and the possession of goods is the real credit.

The other credit is a gamble. The merchant or whoever he may be, is dealing in futures, just as much as a member of the stock exchange. He is gambling that his debtors will, at some time in the future, be sufficientthat trousers were worn by men and ly solvent to take care of their inpants by women. Judging by what debtedness. If they are in a position to pay he reaps the reward. If view would hardly be accepted. It however a large number are insolvent he goes into bankruptcy.

The mail order houses are driving the country merchant out of business. Why? Because they do a cash business and are able for that reason to quote much lower prices; and the buyer will patronize the store where the dollar has the most purchasing power.

Legislation to prohibit the credit business for at least three years would increase the buying power of
