Which is the Only University in Canada Giving This Training.

Below will be found the list of graduates in the banking course at Queen's University, which conducted its eleventh annual examinations last month.

Queen's is the only university in Canada giving this training, really acting as an agent in the matter for the Canadian Bankers' Association. The course was established in 1914. It falls into three parts: A preliminary course of six subjects leading to the degree of Associate, an advanced course of six subjects leading to the degree of Fellow of the Canadian Bankers' Association, and courses in Spanish and advanced foreign exchange which are supplementary to the Fellows' course. Tuition in the Associates' course is given by the Shaw Schools, Ltd., Toronto, and in the other courses by Queen's. The training is taken entirely by correspondence. The regulations require that the student is employed by a bank. There are no graduation exercises in connection with the degrees, though the successful candidates receive a diploma. The work at Queen's is directed by Prof. W. A. Mackintosh. As will be observed, students come from far points, including all part of Canada and several from the West Indies.

The graduates in the Fellows' Course are given below in order of standing:

wonderful time—it was and how greatly the "youth and beauties" were honored and impressed with the "great military operations (to us) in which we were embarking."

Possibly our youth had much to do with it all. But when we look back on those halcyon college days there wells up in our throats emotions and feelings of the strongest, tenderest and most hallowed possible. Our affections, high regard and esteem for our brilliant, devoted, efficient, self-sacrificing professors, was genuine and sincere and as I look back I am proud to believe that we had as our teachers, such great men as Principal Grant, the noble mentor of the educational world in our day; our revered world renowned philosopher, the brilliant Dr. Watson; the wonderfully efficient and clever mathematician, N. P. Dupuis, whom we believed to be the discoverer of the science of mathematics and still to us the wonder grow how it was possible for one small head to contain all the good old professor knew. So with them all, every one of them, the truest, the best and most self-sacrificing of men, all sincere in making Queen's the great university it has become.

will have its appeal for one and all. Could we not also, with consent of elders and deacons and trustees, have the stowed-away-for-summer benches and other seats brought out and placed invitingly on the lovely lawns that surround these churches, under shady trees and against grey limestone walls where all who will might come, without question or price and occupy them thankfully? Perhaps strains of music from organs within, touched by gifted and generous musicians would at intervals reach them and woo inside.

And if church lawns could thus be made to serve, why not our private lawns? Could we not place seats on them near the pavements and conveniently near on small stands pitchers of oft-renewed refreshing water with drinking glasses. In a comparatively short time their beauty and that of the church grounds will have, in the nature of things, faded. Then why not enjoy them to the full by sharing them with our visitors while they and summer days are with us? Some will come to us after long years of absence, to find the home fire out, the hearth cold, the home altar broken down because father and mother, the high priest and priestess of childhood's days, have gone a long journey into the Upper Country and these await the home coming of the boys and girls who still linger in the lowlands. Let them not fail to feel the glow of love and concern for them emanating from the church homes of their youth as they "bide a wee among us."

In a very few days they, "Our Old Boys and Girls" will be with us for a short, rapidly flying and (we trust) happy time. Like many others, I have been thinking. Some, no doubt, most of them will come a bit worn and weary from the year's work. Little remains to be suggested where an efficient and energetic committee of management has provided so wisely and so generously for their entertainment, in addition to all the private hospitality to be dispensed, but could not our many and beautiful churches have open doors during those days they will be with us, through which weary and foot-sore visitors could, if they so desired, enter havens of rest and quiet enjoyment and go forth again refreshed to respond to more active forms of pleasure?

In every heart more or less sentimental, it is no vain thing to sit again in earlier years and gather about us in imagination those who made life a thing of joy for us

BOY SMASHED A WINDOW

And His Father Had to Pay for the Damage.

Boys who play baseball on the street had better watch their step. Baseball should be played in the parks or in vacant lots, away from houses.

A youngster who was playing ball the other day and knocked the ball through a window, was haled to the police court on Wednesday morning, along with his father, and as a result of the broken window, the father of the youngster was called upon to pay for the damage.

Hay Harvest Delayed.
Watertown, N.Y., July 29.—Weather inclemencies is considerably delaying farmers in haying. Getting under way July 6th, the harvest of the county's hay crop should be completed although in many places it is scarcely more than well under way, owing to frequent interruptions by rain. Last week, it is said, many farmers were able to get in only a couple of days work in the hay fields.
