Had to Keep Hands Bandaged. Cuticura Healed.

Eczema broke out in a rash and blisters between my fingers and on the backs of my hands. The skin was red and swollen and used to peel off. It itched and burned badly and was awfully sore especially when I put my hands in water. I had to keep my hands bandaged.

I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and it cured me. I purchased more after using one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment. I was completely healed.

Answer to Wednesday's Crossword Puzzle.

stones that dripped on imitation platinum chains from her ears, the cheap bracelets that crowded her slim arms. Flora, Larrabee admitted to himself, for all her wistful charm, for all she represented to a bored and lonely man, was just what Caroline Prescott was sizing her up to be. His face burned with the thought, but from loyalty to the poor, little, misguided creature, he turned deliberately to the Prescotts, greeted them pleasantly and presented his companion.

To his everlasting humiliation, Caroline ignored Flora dead.

The Young Ladies Receive Gifts at Delta.

Delta, Aug. 3.—Miss Hilda and Hugh White, Toledo, are with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. White. The Baptist S.S. held their annual picnic at Jones' Falls, and a fine time was enjoyed at this beautiful spot. The United Church picnic will be held at the Park grounds and many prizes will be given for sports. Mrs. William Birch is gaining from her recent illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Russell spent Monday in Kingston and visited Miss Sylvia Howard, who is in training at the General Hospital there. Mr. and Mrs. George K. Halladay and their son, Kenneth Halladay, are camping at the Lake. Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Kilbourn were at Brockville for the week-end. Several from here attended the Baptist social held at Plum Hollow.

The anniversary services held here in the Methodist church were largely attended. Rev. Dr. Williams, a former pastor, conducted both services. A male quartette, Rev. Mr. Davies, Mr. Thomas Grant, Mr. Hillard Howard and Dr. Hanna gave a who selection which was greatly enjoyed. Miss Lucy Jackson, who has been ill is better. Mrs. Simkins, Toronto, is with her parents, Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Hanna.

Miss Marie Slack will leave in a week or so to enter St. Francis Hospital, Smiths Falls, for nurse-in-training. Miss Dorothy Keough, daughter of Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Keough, will leave to enter Brockville General Hospital as a nurse. Best wishes will follow these young ladies in their chosen profession, and thermometers have been given them as a farewell token, of the esteem in which they were held.

Mr. and Mrs. Seaman Barlow were called upon to mourn the death of their infant child, aged two weeks, which passed away rather suddenly. Sympathy is extended the parents in their loss. Mrs. M. Seed is ill at her daughter's, Mrs. Alfred Irwin's, and Dr. Kelly is in attendance.

Rev. Mr. Chester, New Westminster, has joined his wife and children who are in camp at the lake, at her parents' cottage, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Pierce. Mrs. Stevens and son, New York State, are at her sister's, Mrs. Stella Irwin's, for a few weeks. Mr. and Mrs. S. Seaman and daughter, Mrs. A. Crawford, and Mr. and Mrs. D. Stevens left on a motor trip for Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec. Mrs. Judy and daughter left for home in Watertown, N.Y., last week, after visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. LaFleche.

About the time that Nan was declining an informal trip to the Orient with Jim Daly and linking her professional future with Devitt as a cabaret singer, Dane Larrabee, helplessly involved in his friendship with Flora Hartley, found himself repeating Mr. Kipling's "And I learned about women from her," with new understanding.

He was certainly learning a great deal about a new species which biologists, at least, would call feminine. He found the knowledge he gleaned rather amusing and diverting to a lonely, bored man whose wife was off seeking adventure elsewhere, but he could scarcely set it down as helpful or necessary to the trend of life.

One of the salient points which Flora taught him was the complete dependence of women of her sort on the beauty parlor. He had never been in the warm, scented, silk-lined interior of one of these until he had met Flora. Vaguely he wondered if Nan ever patronized these alluring salons of feminine loveliness. He scarcely thought so. Her beauty was too fresh, too young, too natural, too redolently the product of exquisite cleanliness and outdoor exercise.

But with Flora the sessions at the beauty shop were a rite which she performed with solemnity—the only solemnity she exhibited in her careless young life. She issued forth from these mysterious treatments, pink and white and soft and perfumed. Sometimes her pretty, vapid face was like a doll's with its heavy layers of alabaster, its scarlet, painted smile, its staring, black-fringed eyes, set under delicately blued lids.

Larrabee, with the fastidiousness of the average man, rather dreaded the evenings of the day when Flora pursued her beauty cult, because she always wanted to be taken to the smartest restaurant to dine, to go to the theatre and sit in a box, to dance afterward at the most popular cabaret where they would be sure to see their entire circle of acquaintances. It seemed that she wished to exhibit her triumph of artificiality. On the evening before she visited the beauty salon, nothing could have dragged her away from home. She fairly moped and hid her face and complained about the wretched state of her hair.

Larrabee invariably experienced difficulty in refraining from the suggestion that, if its state annoyed her, why not try a little soap and water to improve it.

But Flora, blandly unaware that she was amusing him with her foibles, continued to complain and just before he left always demanded that he meet her the following day at the conclusion of her beauty treatments.

On one such occasion, he waited for nearly an hour in the anteroom of a warm, perfumed, beauty salon, the target of curious, feminine eyes, before Flora issued from a booth, looking more than ever like the alabaster doll.

"I have tickets for the new play at the Alhambra tonight. We have just time to dine and get there for the first curtain."

"But don't you want to dress?" he inquired.

"Oh, no, I am quite ready." She lifted a fold of her wrap and revealed an evening gown of cherry colored silk.

"Great Heavens, you didn't come out in that this afternoon, did you?" he exclaimed aghast.

"Why not?" she inquired innocently. "I knew I wouldn't have time to get home and nobody minds anything one wears here."

He shrugged helplessly. He was learning a great deal about women from her—this new careless, modern species that lived by a code of self.

After the theatre, Flora insisted that she was hungry, so they went to supper. To Larrabee's dismay, he discovered after they were seated that Caroline and Gordon Prescott occupied the adjoining table.

Caroline's pale eyes were taking in every detail of his companion's appearance. He could fairly feel them noting the too-red gown, the too-decollete bodice, the imitation ruby comb that flamed in her brown hair, the red
