RADIO BECOMES ALLY OF RIFFIAN REBELS
Operations Against France and Spain in Morocco Are Directed by Wireless.

Paris, Aug. 18.—The use of radio in military communications has been perfected by Abd-el-Krim, the Riff leader, beyond any point heretofore used in this type of warfare.

The wireless telegraph and telephone are Abd-el-Krim's most powerful allies.

For two months I have been a guest in the house of the Riff chieftain. Day after day I have seen him and his aides working at their radio sets, and while I am not a technical man, I have gradually come to realize what an enormous part the radio is playing in the conduct of the Riff campaign.

Highly perfected German apparatus is employed, both at base and in the field. The portable sets, used by the Riffian cavalry scouts, are very compact, fitting into a small leather case carried just behind the saddle. At headquarters, Abd-el-Krim himself uses a complicated 12-tube outfit, which in one large cabinet combines all the necessary equipment for receiving and transmitting, either by telegraph or by telephone.

Back to Arabian Nights.
In the hands of this skillful leader of the tribesmen, the radio has become a veritable reincarnation of one of the geni of the Arabian Nights, actually brought into service by the people who hundreds of years ago wove tales of just such miraculous, and then unbelievable happenings.

Like Aladdin's lamp, there are today in all the remote frontline stations of the Riffian soldiers, these little lamps of radio which burn night and day, carrying back and forth the information which enables the tribesmen to strike swiftly and surely against their enemies.

For many long months Abd-el-Krim has been fighting what seemed to all observers a desperate battle against overwhelming odds, with the combined armies of France and Spain blockading him from contact with the outside world. Krim has overcome much of this handicap by use of the wireless. He has adopted the latest weapon of civilization to fight the armies of the western world.

SEEKING SLAYER OF HANCE AND HIS WIFE
Anderson's Accomplice Is Held in Jail Under Bond of $100,000.

Muncie, Ind., Aug. 18.—Several squads of police armed with high-powered shotguns slipped out of town late yesterday afternoon and headed toward Hartford City, Ind., where George (Dutch) Anderson, notorious criminal and slayer of Ben Hance and his wife, is reported to have been surrounded in a house.

Hance and his wife were marked by Anderson as the betrayers of Gerald Chapman, notorious gun man and mail bandit. Hance furnished information which led to the arrest of Chapman last January, and testified against Chapman in his trial for the slaying of a Connecticut police officer.

Charles Wolfe, Anderson's accomplice, is held in the county jail under bond of $100,000.

He refused to answer any questions put to him by officers, although he has been grilled almost constantly since he was captured several hours after the shooting.

Wolfe and Anderson were both named by Hance in a statement he gaped out a few minutes after he was found beside the road in front of the home of Charles Cromer, whose wife was the only eyewitness of the slayings.

Besides being named in the dying statement, Wolfe was identified by three citizens of Yorktown, a small village between here and the scene of the slayings, as the man they saw in an automobile with a second man, who answered to the description of Anderson, mail robber and escaped federal prisoner.

This Speedy West of Ours.
Financial Post, Toronto: In the days when Western Canada was booming, it was said that towns grew so fast that they were reporting hundred thousand dollar fires before the outside world was aware of their existence. And now stock raisers on the prairies is developing so rapidly that the government is organizing to prevent the depredations of cattle thieves before the east generally is alive to the fact that the farmers have gone in seriously for mixed farming.

If only the old-fashioned girl is unbobbed, hairpins in the ear have at last become an alibi.

About the freshest things to be found on a farm in the summer are the city boarders.
