What the Press Agents Say About Coming Attractions

AT GRAND THEATRE.

Great Singer and Dancing in Big Revue To-night.

Nature was liberal when she endowed Margaret Daley, the melodious and beautiful songstress who will be here with "Flashes of the Great White Way" when that attraction holds forth at the Grand-Opera House to-night. Miss Daley prefers to have critics dwell upon her vocal art—and well they may—but men of the press would indeed be less than human were they not to praise the wondrous beauty of this titian haired songstress. To the feminine eye Miss Daley's gown by Polart are a never ending source of amazement and delight. Hazel Mason is the female mainstay of the comedy element, and last year she played a similar role in George M. Cohan's "Little Nellie Kelly." Dorothy Charles is one of the dancing stars in this brilliant constellation. A few good seats are still available.

The Georgia Minstrels.

The hat is the most humorous part of the human wearing apparel, declared Tim Owsley, who is one of the principal comedians with the Famous Georgia Minstrels, coming to the Grand Theatre Saturday, Matinee and night, Aug. 29th. The dresses and suits can, with some difficulty, be associated with laughter, continues Owsley. The slightest tampering with a hat will produce immediate merriment. Just why this is, no one had been able to explain, but from my own observation, I believe that the hat is somehow associated with the individual's intellectuality. When the hat goes awry all the rest of him goes awry with it. Some one has said that anything that falls below the normal or ideal standard of life is humorous, and this principle certainly applies to the hat. When a hat is placed on the head at the correct angle it is merely a sedate part of the costume, but just let this hat slope slightly over one ear, cover one eye or rest too far back on the head, and it makes the wearer look ridiculous, particularly is this true of a man's hat.

With the Georgia Minstrels at the Grand Theatre, Saturday, August 29th, matinee and night.

Tim Owsley has made a decided hit with the Famous Georgia Minstrels.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"Quo Vadis" is a Very Unusual Picture.

The film version of "Quo Vadis" which is now showing at the Capitol Theatre, offers something novel in the way of motion picture entertainment. Emil Jennings does a splendid characterization of Nero, with Lillian Hall Davis, the English stage star, appearing as Lygia, his beautiful Christian hostage.

The picture was filmed in Rome, on the actual site of Nero's tyrannies. Twenty thousand men, women and children make up the stupendous cast.

"Quo Vadis" is replete with thrills, picturing vividly the burning of Rome by Nero, as an inspiration for his stupid verses, the burning of the Christian martyrs at the stake, and the hurling of other Christians to the lions in the Arena. Ursus, giant slave of Lygia, the beautiful Christian girl, is shown in battle with the savage bull, to whose back Nero had caused his mistress to be bound.

The inhumanities of the tyrant are softened, however, by the tender love theme of Lygia and Vincius, the Roman general, and the supreme faith of the Christians in the teachings of their leader, Peter the Apostle.

Guiltily.

The school board visited a school the other day, and, of course, the principal put his pupils through their paces for the benefit of said austere board.

"James," he asked, turning to one boy, "who signed the Magna Charta?"

"Please, sir, 'twasn't me," whimpered Jimmy.

The teacher, in disgust, told the boy to sit down; but old Ted Simpkins, chairman of the board, was not satisfied. "Call back that there boy," he said vehemently, "I don't like his actions. I believe he did do it."

A FITTING CLOSING TO ANNUAL RETREAT

FOR HIKING

Tomorrow's sun, a day of toil, a night of care.

In cold relentless round they come and go.

And give their place in turn to other days

Patterned like them, monotonous and gray.

But I would miss the duties of each day

And could not walk with confidence in ways

All new to me; so, happy to and fro

In dear familiar paths I, grateful, fare.

For on the dull and somber background I trace a glint of threads woven on there.

Purple and rose and gold—I am not blind—

And though my days to you might tedious seem

My tasks familiar grown, give time to dream.

And memory, fond associations, kind Encounters, all do beautiful colors share

And I would sightless have to be, to sigh.

Meeting of Cabinet Council.
Ottawa, Aug. 27.—The Cabinet Council adjourned today after a brief meeting when routine business was disposed of. It is understood that final government sanction to the completion of the merger between the Union Bank of Canada and the Royal Bank was given. Application of the Seaman-Backus interests for a pulp concession in Northern Manitoba was not, it is stated, discussed. Premier King did not attend.

The death occurred in a Toronto hospital Tuesday of Mrs. J. K. White, Brockville. Before her marriage she was Miss Florence Dool, daughter of William Dool, Kemptonville, and was born there forty-three years ago.

Some heads are made to carry brains, while others merely serve as hat racks.

Here's the outfit President Coolidge wore on his recent tramp over the Vermont hills near his father's home at Plymouth, Vt. The typically New England long jumper and boots are the every day attire of many farmers in that section. This picture was taken by a Plymouth photographer who planned to make some pin money by selling it to tourists, but a presidential spokesman let it be known that the chief executive preferred to have his boots suppressed.
