Blue Skies—Everywhere!

Sometimes our minds are fretted out with troubles that don't come!
We dread the storms which don't arise—the tempests which are dumb.
We look for all the bitterness in every fruit that grows; While every faded bit of cloth in life's great vesture shows!
Let's pluck up courage—sing a bit—and wipe our eyes and say,
"The skies are blue and glorious above the clouds of grey!"
Sometimes there falls upon the road
a shadow black with fears; An enemy seems stalking us with failure and with tears!
And you and I would "cut him dead," but he—he whispers low,
"You must just walk a mile or two along the track I go!"
Let's shoulder up our drab-hued pack and walk head-high and say,
"The sun is breaking—skies are bright—beyond the bank of grey!"

There's such a lot of roses strewn around us everywhere
If only we would look for them with happy vision clear!
The joy-birds carol in the trees! The breezes swing their scent!
And all the world's a dear old world, if we are heart-content.
So put your brightest wits to work and, as you're striding on, You'll find blue skies and sun a-shine—the clouds will all be gone!
