JOKES ABOUT ABERDEEN.

Argonaut.

Jokes about the citizens of Aberdeen, Scotland, are so numerous and are so much of one cloth as to arouse curiosity as to their source. Have the jokes about the closeness of the Aberdonians a basis in fact, or has Aberdeen simply been found a convenient tag for stories about close-fistedness? Allen Junior, in his "Canny Tales Frae Aberdeen," advances the explanation that an Aberdonian organized a club to manufacture stories against the residents of the Scotch city in order to "pull the leg" of the credulous English. As Mr. Junior gives the name of neither the club nor its founder, his explanation may be set down as interesting, if true.

The stories in Mr. Junior's book, whether true or untrue, are altogether gorgeous. Here are a few of them:

An Aberdonian in London wrote home: "I'm enjoying my holiday, especially the Restaurants, whaur I often find tuppence under the plate! P. S.—If there is no stamp on the envelope it fell off in the post."

"Two Aberdonians and a Jew were attending what they understood was a Free Lecture in London. During the course of the meetings a collection was announced. The Jew faint-ed and the two Aberdonians carried him out."

"Can ye tell me," asked an Aberdonian of an English visitor, "can ye tell me why we Aberdonians have a gift o' humor?" "I suppose," replied the visitor, "it's because it is a gift."

"Two Aberdonians were brought before the police court for being drunk and disorderly. During the hearing the Bailie asked the prosecutor: "What other man, sir?" "The man who paid for the drinks!"

"It was an Aberdonian who, hearing that a certain doctor charged 6s. 6d. for a first consultation, and 2s. 6d. for a second, went to him and said, "Here we are again, doctor." The doctor ventured to reply, "I don't remember seeing you before." "Oh, yes, I was here last week." "Oh, indeed, I had forgotten. How are you keeping?" "Not well at all, doctor, not well at all." "Let me see," replied the doctor. "Just continue your last prescription for another week. That will be 2s. 6d., please."

Will the Eyes of Children Change?

Not at all likely. An error of vision caused by an abnormal shape or size of the eyes will never change of itself. Glasses do not change the error. They neutralize it, or cause the eyes to act as if the error did not exist. Don't hope that your children's eyes, if abnormal will become normal. At your command any day.
