DOMINIONS ARE FREE.

Locarno Treaty Imposes No Obligations on Them.
London, Oct. 21.—The article of the Locarno treaty which is of prime importance to Canada—Article IX—leaves to all the British Dominions complete independence of action in connection with the terms of the treaty. The article reads: "The present treaty shall impose no obligation upon any of the British Dominions, or upon India, unless the government of such Dominions, or of India, signifies its acceptance thereof."

CAPITOL THEATRE WAS CROWDED

a document from the files, and that if I had provided this document, the trouble would have been settled and that the country would have been saved a lot of expense. He also charges that I received a letter from Mr. Hays in regard to the matter. Mr. Hays never wrote me a letter. The agreement made was between the employees and the company. I was a witness. It was stated that the men were to be restored to their positions as soon as possible. These latter words caused much discussion. The men stated that 'as soon as possible' might mean any time. They wanted some specific time. Eventually the company decided that 'as soon as possible' would mean ninety days. The men were satisfied at this, but they wanted to be sure that they were not to be deceived."

Premier King stated further, that he announced the terms of the agreement. Mr. Hays was living at that time, and his statement was never contradicted.
"Then as to the letter, Mr. Meighen claims I took from the file. I wanted to make myself strong regarding the ninety days. I went to Mr. Wainwright, the vice-president of the Grand Trunk, and later he came to Ottawa and on behalf of Mr. Hays intimated that 'as soon as possible' meant ninety days. The document I secured was not of a public nature. It was of a private nature, for my own protection. I made a statement about having this document, but the government did not act."

"People who live in glass houses should not throw stones," said Premier King, in his final summing up of the matter.
Mr. McKelvey thanked Premier King for his instructive address.

Mr. H. H. Horsey's Address.
Mr. H. H. Horsey, who was introduced by the chairman, Mr. McKelvey, as one of the best outside wings Queen's team ever had on its line-up, stated that Hon. Mr. Meighen had sent out a challenge, but declared that his policy is entirely wrong, and added: "We can demonstrate to the people that a high tariff is not to their interest. A high tariff could create an industry provided goods were needed, and no surplus was expected."

"The tariff is not the chief question in this election, it is not transportation, and it is not immigration or senate reform, it is vital and important as each of these are. The supreme question is that of national unity."
Mr. Horsey added that since Confederation, a great deal had been accomplished to bring about harmony among the different races. The great difficulty today, was in getting economic conditions. "One thing we do know, and that is that the question will never be settled until the people of the various sections realize their local success and prosperity is bound up with the prosperity of the whole nation."

How had the King Government faced the supreme issue? Had they paid proper regard to it? What was the policy of the King Government? The policy of the King Government was that of a "moderate revenue tariff." It was a revenue-producing tariff. The policy of the King Government was one for the welfare and good of all classes and sections of Canada.

Praise for Mr. Campbell.
Mr. Horsey paid a warm tribute to Mr. Campbell, and put forth a strong appeal in his behalf.

"Mr. Campbell needs your assistance. He needs your aid. He wishes you to use that power of influence that you have in his behalf. I would ask that tonight you determine that you will work for him. The women have only had the franchise a short time, but in the past they have had 'indirect political influence.' There are many women who have not had time to give a study to these matters, and I would ask that you bring these questions to their attention, and impress on them the facts; that this government has not only a great record, but that it stands for national unity. In every matter before the government, the members have in mind the question of country first."

"And what have we as an alternative to the King Government? We have Hon. Mr. Meighen, a great parliamentarian, a fine debator and a keen constitutional lawyer. He is a wonderful man, but it is not his great powers of oratory that we must judge. Judge him on his record: He is not a new man or has he a new policy. The people of Canada have seen him perform and that is sufficient."
Mr. Horsey declared that during the regime of Mr. Meighen as Prime Minister, that Canada had reached the zero mark. Farms went down, immigration stopped and railway systems were in a state of chaos.

The Light That Failed.
"This was the record under the Meighen Government," added Mr. Horsey, and just at this moment the lights in the theatre went out.
"Never mind, we will go on just the same," called out the chairman, Mr. McKelvey, and Mr. Horsey proceeded with his speech in the dark for about ten minutes, when the lights came on again. There was no commotion or confusion whatever in the audience as a result of the darkness. Candles were secured for the speakers' table.

Continuing, Mr. Horsey predicted better times ahead for Canada. "We have a great Prime Minister—a man trained in political science and political economy—a man, with a full grasp of the great labor problems—a man experienced in arbitration and the settlement of great industrial disputes. We have Mr. King, the author, orator and a great public servant. We have our duty to perform. You are citizens of no mean city. Let us do our part. This is our business. Let us make up our minds that we are going to get behind Mr. Campbell, who is Kingston's friend."

Mr. R. T. Harding's Address.
In his address, Mr. Harding declared that this country could not live without foreign trade. The country was growing slowly, but surely. The speaker dealt at some length with the stand Hon. Mr. Meighen has taken on the tariff and added:

"This is no time for you and I to rock the ship. This country's trade is increasing, unemployment is also decreasing. And when you support Mr. Campbell, you are supporting a man who is supporting a policy that is for the whole of Canada—a policy for every province in Canada. He is supporting a leader who is welcome in every province in the Dominion of Canada (Loud applause)."

"I hope that on Oct. 29th, that every person in Kingston will go to the polls and vote. It is a privilege; it is a duty that every man and woman owes to the country, to take an interest. A man without patriotism is a poor specimen. Vote for Mr. Campbell, and let the majority be so big that your voice will be heard from Halifax to Vancouver."
Mr. Harding touched on a great many of the issues which have been raised in the campaign, and was given a most attentive hearing.

Premier Played His Part.
Mr. McKelvey, prior to the arrival of Premier King, stated that he wished to refer to a matter that had been raised during the campaign. He had reference to the question as to the part played by Premier King, when the great war was on.

The speaker had been asked by a certain party why Mr. King did not go overseas. Mr. McKelvey then went into details, stating that when the world war came on, Mr. King was faced with a serious problem. He had an invalid mother, while his father was blind. In addition to his parents, he had a brother-in-law under his care, who was ill. At this time, Mr. King was headed for a political career. He felt that he must do something. He was of the opinion that it was his duty to go overseas. He was advised that he must do the big thing. He worked for the Rockefeller Foundation, and did splendid service.

The speaker said he wished to make this explanation in order to meet the charges that were being made, and his remarks were warmly applauded.

Notes of the Gatherings

All the Liberal stalwarts of Kingston were out to hear Premier King last night.

People who wanted to know what Premier King thought of the Union Jack found it out last night.

"The greatest political address ever delivered in Kingston," was the declaration of university men.

Mr. Norman T. North, assistant superintendent of Division, looked after Mr. King's car while it was in this division.

"If we could only preach like that," remarked a young clergyman after hearing the Premier's masterly address at the Grand Theatre.

The clergy of Kingston were strongly represented on the Grand Theatre stage last night. The church is behind J. M. Campbell and the Liberal chieftain.

It was a great tribute Premier King paid to Mr. John L. McKelvey, the vice-president of the Kingston Liberal Association and famous Queen's rugby player.

The visiting newspaper men who have been with the Premier from coast to coast stated that last night's address was the greatest the Prime Minister has delivered in his whole journey across Canada.

The audience at the Capitol Theatre was treated to a Hamilton comedy, in addition to the addresses. The Capitol orchestra also favored with a splendid programme of music before the meeting opened.

"I hear everywhere that Campbell will be elected," said one old Liberal. "Of course he will win, but I will tell you how much majority he will get. I figure that he will win by over 600 majority on the 29th."

The highly trained man showed himself at his best when the lights went out at the Grand. Premier King never wavered, but went right ahead with his speech, and most of the big audience forgot that he was speaking in the darkness.

It was very noteworthy that two small boys, despite the great crowd, picked off two seats right in the front row of the house and listened with open mouths and bated breaths as the Premier made his address. They may be premiers themselves some day.

The newspaper men who accompanied Premier King to Kingston were: Edgar Marsh, Montreal Star; F. R. Edward, New York Herald; R. C. Reade, Toronto Star; F. C. Mears, Toronto Globe; George Hambleton, chief of staff, Canadian Press, Ottawa; Tom Taylor, C. N. R. Telegraph Press superintendent.
