What the Press Agents Say About Coming Attractions

"PRETTY LADIES" AT CAPITOL.

Zasu Pitts, Tom Moore, Lilyan Tashman and Roy D'Arcy in Principal Roles.

An all-star cast, including several of the most famous artists of the screen, will be seen in Monta Bell's "Pretty Ladies," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, which comes to the silver sheet of the Capitol Theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and which was adapted by Alice D. G. Miller from an original story written by Adela Rogers St. Johns.

The leading roles are taken by Zasu Pitts and Tom Moore. One of the screen's best leading men, Conrad Nagel, is a member of the supporting cast, as is Norma Shearer, featured player of so many Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures. Roy D'Arcy, who will soon be seen as the Crown Prince in "The Merry Widow," plays the role of a man about town, while George K. Arthur, famous as a comedian, has one of the principal parts. Lilyan Tashman, who is fast becoming one of the best "feminine heavies" of the screen, is seen as Zasu's rival, and others in the cast include Helena O'Algy, Bernard Randall, Lucille LeSueur, Paul Ellis, Dorothy Seastrom, Betty Arlen, Gwendolyn Lee, Lew Harvey, Chad Huber, Walter Shumway and Jimmie Quinn.

As an extra feature, Ann Pennington, well known musical comedy star, is seen doing the Charleston in "Pretty Ladies." There is also a chorus made up of Hollywood's fairest maidens, who have been taught intricate dance steps by Fanchon, who is a co-member of the team of Fanchon and Marco, well-known dance delineators.

The lives of the blind inmates of Clarkwood House, on Sherbourne Street, Toronto, are brightened by many acts of kindness, but there are perhaps, no visits which they appreciate more than those of a group of telephone operators. These girls have made the unfortunate ones of Clarkwood House their special care. On the occasion of their periodical visits, the chief entertainment is dancing in which they tenderly guide their blind friends to the music of the gramophone. Then a dainty lunch is served, and the tired but delighted inmates vow that blindness has its compensations after all.

VAUDEVILLE AT THE GRAND.

Programme Meets With the Approval of the Patrons. That the vaudeville and moving pictures at the Grand Theatre has met with the approval of the patrons, is clearly evidenced by the large attendance at every performance. Friday night a very large number enjoyed the performance, the vaudeville being very fine, and the main picture a scream.

Marjah was the feature of the vaudeville. Besides rendering valuable aid to persons desiring questions answered, he also provided plenty of amusement. Sheehan and Startzman, in their comedy act, kept the audience in continual mirth, and Betty Bernard scored a hit with her southern songs. Strad and Legato, in their duets, also scored a hit.

OFF to the Game.

Ready For Appeal.

It was learned on Saturday morning that the solicitors acting for the Unionists at St. John's church, Pittsburgh township, have all the documents ready for the appeal, which will be heard in Toronto shortly. The Unionists object to the decision of Justice Logie, who refused to grant them an injunction restraining the Continuing Presbyterians from interfering with the services at St. John's church.

Let Everybody Do It.

The ever prevalent clown was present, besides many other Hallowe'en figures. The dance was greatly enjoyed.

We Thought So Too.
