FROM THE OUTSIDE LOOKING IN

The decision of the Athletic Board of Queen's University in allowing the team to carry on to try and win another Dominion championship shows the spirit of those in charge. Should they accomplish this feat, and there is no doubt but what they will, they will have done something that no other team in the history of Canadian rugby has been able to do, and the graduates next year, Batstone, Leadley, Thomas, McKelvey, and all, will be able to look back with real pride on their athletic endeavor while students of Queen's University. Balmy Beach will, most likely, be the first opponent of the Queen's team and the game will be played in Toronto on Nov. 21st, while a week later the finals will be staged. No team will represent the west this season and the boys will not lose much time. They are having a good rest now after their strenuous season, but will soon go back into active training.—The Belleville Ontario.

The open season for selecting all-star football teams has arrived. Why not make the decision short and snappy by simply saying Queen's? Any team that can win twenty-four consecutive games has few weak spots.—The Hamilton Spectator.

It's not a bit too early to make preparations for the hockey season, especially in City League circles. There is a strong feeling that the City Hockey League was not given a "fair shake" last winter. The teams were to play again towards the latter end of the season, but the majority of them were broken up after a long layoff and did not feel like going on again. It is hoped that some definite arrangement can be arrived at this season. Incidentally, it is to be hoped that no more than four teams at the outside will be entered in the series. Too many teams make the race uninteresting and tend to weaken them instead of having them at top strength.

SPEAKER UNPOPULAR WITH CLEVELAND FANS

The Club Is Anxious to Secure the Services of Aaron Ward.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 7.—Although President E. S. Barnard, of the Cleveland Baseball Club, denied that he was dickering with the New York Yankees for Aaron Ward and Wally Pipp, it is considered likely that Cleveland will make an effort to at least acquire Ward.

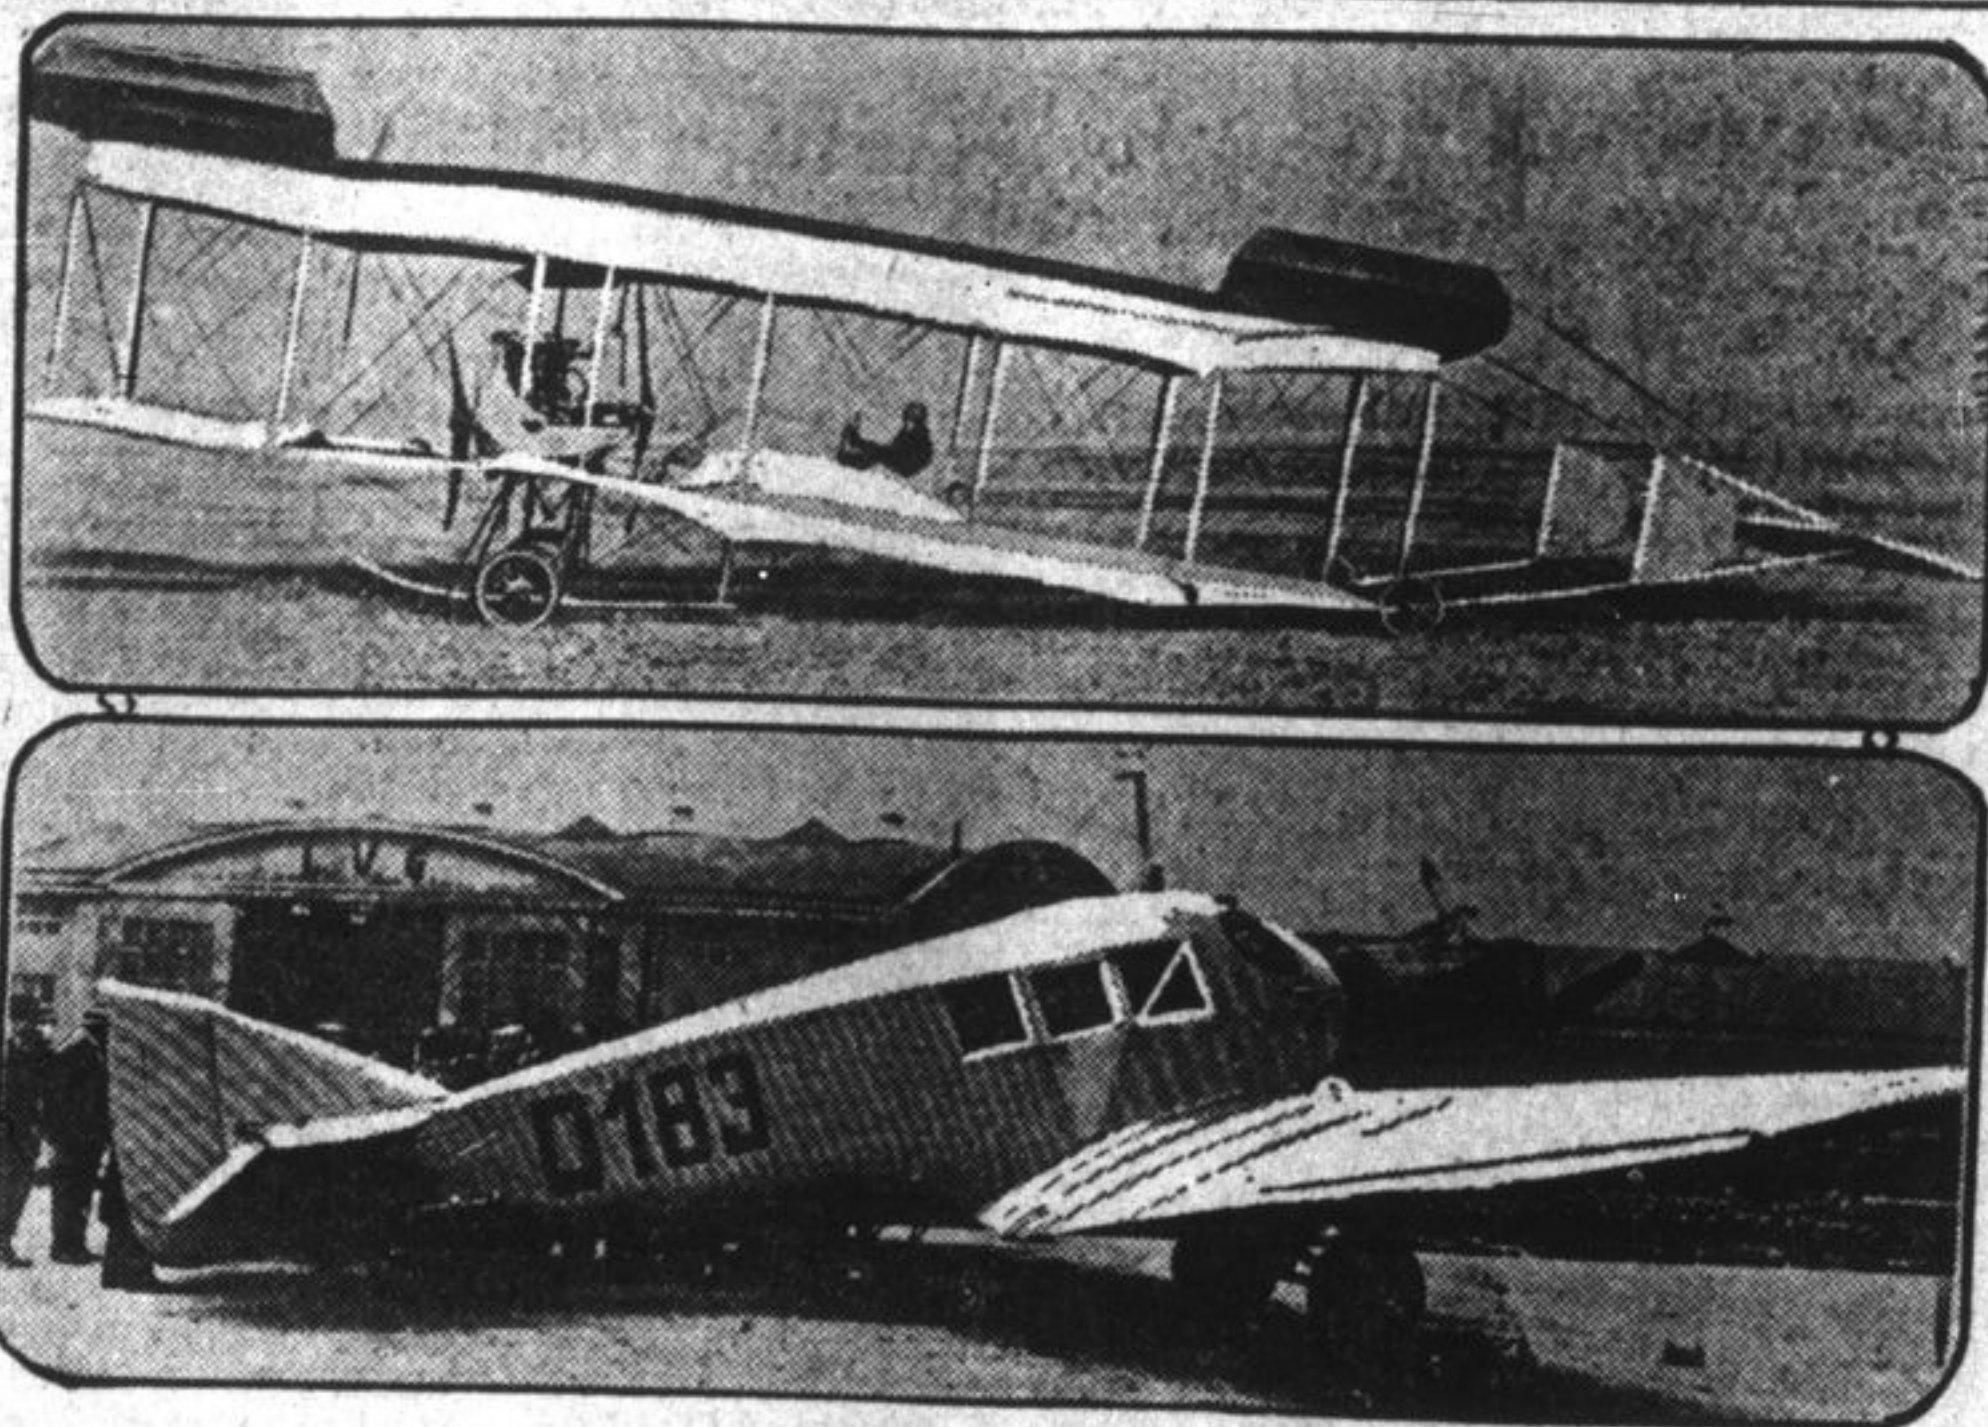

Barnard declared that he would never trade outfielder Charley Jamieson for Ward and Pipp. This is entirely reasonable. To trade Jamieson would weaken the team, even though Ward and Pipp came here. But a number of trades are expected this winter, for Cleveland must be represented by a winning team next year or the fans will not support the Indians.

It has been four years since the local team made any kind of a fight for the pennant. During these four years, fans have clamored for new players and a new manager. Many wanted Tris Speaker ousted from the club.

Mrs. James C. Dunn, owner of the club, put to rest rumors that a new manager would succeed Speaker by signing the present manager to boss the club next season. But Barnard, Speaker and Mrs. Dunn are known to be in the market for new players.

While no official statement has been made by club officials, it has been rumored that Cleveland is willing to part with a number of players in an effort to strengthen the team. Lutzke, Fewster, Summa, Walters, Cole, Hendrick, Hodapp and Spurgeon are some of the players likely to be used as trade material.

It would occasion no great surprise if George Uhle and Joe Shaute, two of the club's best pitchers, were placed on the market. Neither has done anything of late, and the club would be willing to trade both for a consistent winner.

Cleveland must have a winning team to draw the fans, and it is considered almost certain that at least ten of the present roster will be missing when the Indians open the 1926 season.

Shaughnessy Found Reinhart for Cards

Syracuse, N.Y., Nov. 7.—During the last month of the 1925 season local fandom displayed as much interest in the games played by the St. Louis Cardinals as they did for the contending pennant winners in the big league race. Most of the attention was centered in Art Reinhart and Tommy Thevenow, who, for two seasons, gave their best every minute for the Syracuse team.

No pitcher in baseball ever worked harder for a team than Reinhart did for Syracuse. But not once did he have a winning percentage.

The deal that resulted in Frank Shaughnessy being replaced here by Hi Myers really paved the way for Reinhart going to the Cardinals.

Shaughnessy joined the Cardinals as a scout when he left the stars and was on duty a week before resigning and taking up the Providence management. In that week Shaughnessy established Reinhart's reputation with the Cardinals far more firmly than previous Reinhart performances had done.

Hornsby had just taken over command of the Cardinals and was somewhat peeved at Branch Rickey's action in sending Tom Thevenow to Syracuse for the season. Hornsby was of the opinion that Thevenow would be of real service to the Cardinals, but under the agreement made with Syracuse, Thevenow had to stay the whole season, or else a satisfactory substitute must be provided, and Hornsby did not have one at that time.

Shaughnessy insisted the Cards would really gain by having Thevenow stay out the year, saying that he would absolutely guarantee Tommy would step into the St. Louis shortstop berth next spring, never to be replaced unless because of injury or old age.

"But they've got one man up in Syracuse who'll help you a lot right now, and that is Reinhart," Shaughnessy told Hornsby. "Bring Reinhart in now and he'll win 60 per cent. of his ball games in the National League. I don't think he will win more than 40 per cent., if he stays in the International, but he'll thrive up there where the umpires will give him strikes when he pitches over the corners."

And Shaughnessy's recommendation, Manager Hornsby lost no time in negotiating with President Martelme for the services of the Stars' most faithful southpaw. Reinhart's big league record shows that he lived up to Shaughnessy's prediction and was a factor in helping the Cardinals finish in fourth place.
