HEARTS ADRIFT

By Mildred Barbour. A Bit of Strategy. Since Chance could not possibly arrange his meeting with Alma Cartwright, as it had done with Lila, Patterson was alive to the fact that strategy was necessary. He fully appreciated the necessity for finesse and he did not underestimate the difficulty of the task he had set out for himself. Mrs. Cartwright was almost a recluse. She would be suspicious on guard, against any attempt at acquaintance. She would avoid any effort on his part to seek presentation along social lines, no matter how proper his credentials might be. Many had tried it in the years since the Cartwright-Bannister scandal had held the front pages of the press, some through friendly reasons, others through sheer curiosity, but all had failed. Her house on the Square was a citadel which none had succeeded in storming. Her drawing room was darkened and empty. Alma herself, was proud, cold, quiet, resentful against sympathy. Patterson moved deliberately to accomplish his purpose. He found out, first, the name of the charity to which she subscribed. He learned that it was an orphan's home and that she was president of the board of governors. It was the only place where she appeared in public. Her passionate love for children led her to this single concession in the rigid life she had laid out for herself. Patterson wrote a letter to the home, saying that he had learned of, and was interested in its work, and sent a substantial cheque—a very substantial cheque—one that made the eyes of the secretary bulge when she opened the letter and saw its denomination. Then he waited, controlling his impetuosity as best he could, devoting most of his days and evenings to the diversion of Lila. But in due time, an answer came to his shaft launched into darkness. It came in the form of a letter signed by Alma Cartwright, as president of the board, thanking him for his donation, and suggesting that he might be interested in seeing personally the scope of the work and assuring himself to what excellent uses his charitable subscription was being put. It named a visitor's day when he could be received by the other members of the board and conducted through the home. He went, eagerly, impatiently—

MARRIED AT ARDOCH. A Very Happy Event in the Anglican Church. Ardoch, Nov. 10.—At Ardoch on Monday, Nov. 8th, St. John's Anglican church was the scene of a wedding of unusual interest. The contracting parties being Miss Mamie Smith, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, and Baiden Watkins, second son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Watkins. At 2 p.m., the bride appeared, becomingly attired in a blue silk crepe frock with sand trimmings and hat and shoes to harmonize. She took her place at the decorated altar while the appropriate hymns were being played by Mrs. Lorne McDonald. Then came the solemn vows, by which Rev. T. Branch tied the nuptial knot. After the ceremony a blissful crowd wished the couple many happy years of blessed union; they and their attendants, who were Miss Iola Smith, bride's cousin, and Charles Watkins, groom's brother, left amid showers of rice and confetti for the bride's home where a bountiful supper was served to immediate relatives. In the evening a reception was held in the hall and the generous supply of miscellaneous articles received from the populace, proved the high esteem in which the couple are held. Handsome presents were also presented from both fathers of both bride and groom. Mr. and Mrs. Watkins are leaving for a honeymoon trip to Kingston, Cobourg, Picton and other points. They will reside here. The citizens were shocked to hear of the tragic drowning of the late Robert Eady of Perth. He was a former resident of Omphah and also well known here. He was hunting at Red Horse Lake, near Folger Station, and the details of the accident are not definite, except that the body was found floating clinging to a canoe. John Fraser still remains a patient in Kingston Hotel. Mrs. Briggs (formerly Miss Mac McLean) also husband and sister-in-law, Smith's Falls, were present for the Watkins-Smith wedding. Sympathy is extended to Walter Vilneff, late of Fernleigh, but who has been the proprietor of Kaladar hotel. He and family were obliged to come to his parents' home for protection as his hotel in a mass of ruins from fire of unknown origin. They were obliged to escape to safety in night clothing. Miss Loretta Henrotta, Perth, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. M. Weber. William Hartman, M. Gunsinger and Joseph Schonauer, Jr., are the last to return from the harvesters' excursion. Miss E. Ireton, Perth, is renewing acquaintances here. Mrs.

The "Protection" that light affords. A N unlighted house is an invitation to unwelcome callers. And yet for less than the price of a car fare, you can protect your home with light, during an entire evening's absence. A home half lighted is like a home half warmed—poor economy at the cost of comfort. Electric light is the least expensive of all modern conveniences, and costs even less to-day than it did before the war. Whether you own or rent your home, you are the one to light it properly. But don't regard that as a problem—just use Edison Mazda Lamps generously throughout the house. Near you is an Edison Mazda Lamp Agent. There you can obtain real information about good lighting.
