The Editor Hears

That the people who woke up early on Christmas had an opportunity of beginning the day by giving breakfast to the birds that had awakened to a breakfastless morning. Now that the snow has come, the Junior Audubon Society will find plenty of work to do feeding the birds who stay with us during the winter.

That under the auspices of the Orphans' Guild a number of stockings of a substantial size were filled in the Roman Catholic homes of Kingston and distributed to the orphans of St. Mary's-of-the-Lake who had a jolly time enjoying the numerous gifts filling the big stockings.

That neither zero weather nor snow seems to discourage the lilac bushes in the C.P.R. gardens from putting forth leaves in anticipation of the coming spring. Now that Mr. Stockbridge announced that his bushes are showing leaves, other citizens have been examining trees and report a decided sign of life. This they say points to an early spring.

That Santa Claus called on every one in Kingston. In all the institutions splendid Christmas dinners were served, the wards of the hospitals were gaily decorated and nothing was left undone to make the Birthday of the Christ Child a happy time for the poor and the sick, those of whom He said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these My Brethren, ye have done it unto Me."

That in most of the churches the Christmas music will be repeated on Sunday and the dear old carols sung. A request came to the churchwardens of St. George's cathedral to have the music of Christmas Day and Sunday broadcasted so that the "shut-ins" could enjoy it. Unfortunately the request came too late to have the required wiring done, and the applications made to the telephone company. It is hoped to have arrangements made later whereby the music can be enjoyed and the sermons heard by those unable to attend the service.

That on Christmas Eve Santa Claus had a busy time distributing the toys brought to the churches by the Sunday school children. They were taken around in cars, and some of the surplus will be sent to children in the backward country places where the shops do not hold such wonderful things for fifteen or twenty-five cents.

That the country looked like a picture, showing a typical Canadian Christmas on the eve of the festival. The evergreens were powdered with snow, the fields were softly covered and the ponds were frozen. Blue smoke arose from the farm house chimneys and one fancied the mother baking the good things that the boys and girls, home from college and school and from the big cities, where the shops are crowded, thought the most delicious things they ever tasted when they sat down to the table on Christmas Day.

HOME IS BEST. Distant hills look green and smooth and beautifully rounded, but a nearer view discloses gullies and ravines and tangled underbrush. We must not be deceived by distance which only "hides" enchantment to the view," remarks the Charlotte-town, P.E.I., Guardian. The hills and the fields and the landscape beside us are just as beautiful as those afar off and when seen from afar, as the homeland is, by many to-day who have gone abroad in quest of something better because far away, seem to possess many beauties and advantages which they failed to note and even despised when among them. Let us not, like the unthinking and greedy horse, strain painfully and to our hurt through the fence which borders the homeland. Let us enjoy the forage which our own fields provide, the workmanship of our own people, the merchandise in our own stores and the love of our neighbors. If we do this we shall, like the horse, find that what we possess is just as good as that beyond the fence and as much coveted by those outside as the distant pastures are coveted by us.

When You Serve. Game, garnish it with parsley, olives, pickled beets, sliced oranges, current cranberry or grape jelly. Rabbit or squirrel as pot-pie, put it in a tureen and place dumplings over the top. Ham croquettes have a cream sauce, and peas with it. Vegetables, avoid waste of food by not having too large a variety at one meal. Whipped cream puffs from the bakery, impart the home-cooked flavor with a chocolate sauce poured over the top.

In its natural process of evolution the world slowly becomes better in spite of all reformers can do.

ST. GEORGE'S MISSION.

An Interesting Entertainment Held in the Sunday School.

The St. George's Mission Sunday school held a very interesting entertainment on Wednesday. The programme consisted of Christmas choruses, music songs, drills and a play entitled "The Sleeping Beauty," in which the principals were Charles Payne and Elsie Catermole as the king and queen; Ethel Blake and James Bocking as the princess and prince; Bertram Wright as the old woman, with Nancy Jarrett as the wicked fairy, and Mabel Greenless with a band of small fairies who delighted the audience with fairy songs. As a conclusion of the programme, Dr. Austin amused everybody with shadow pictures of the delightful children's story of Peter Rabbit, Reddy Fox, Farmer Brown's Dog and the Black Cat. Mrs. Calvin Bearance and Miss Vera Lowing acted as accompanists.

Rewards for perfect attendance at Sunday school were given to Isabel Fraser, Mabel Greenless, Jack Harper, Nancy Jarrett, Violet Marsh, Nora Harrison, Leona Tatak, Mary Thompson, Lily Thompson, Arthur Thompson, and Jack Thompson, and sixty-two other scholars were rewarded for having attended over thirty Sundays out of a possible attendance of forty-four. The presentations were made by Mr. Charles Dalton, who takes an active interest in the work of the Mission, assisted by the teachers. Rev. W. E. Kidd acted as chairman.

Keep the vinegar from sweet pickles and put it in a bottle or glass, leaving the spices in it. When making salad dressings, strain out the spices and use the vinegar. It gives a delicious flavor.

Post-Christmas Duties. That often difficult task—writing notes of thanks for Christmas presents—is generally performed by the home woman on December 26th. For, with New Year's Day but a short distance ahead—another big dinner to plan and prepare, other guests to entertain—the alert housewife wishes to "wind up the loose ends" of Christmas as speedily as possible. Writing notes, however, is not the only post-Christmas duty. Methodical housekeepers consider the following tasks quite as important:

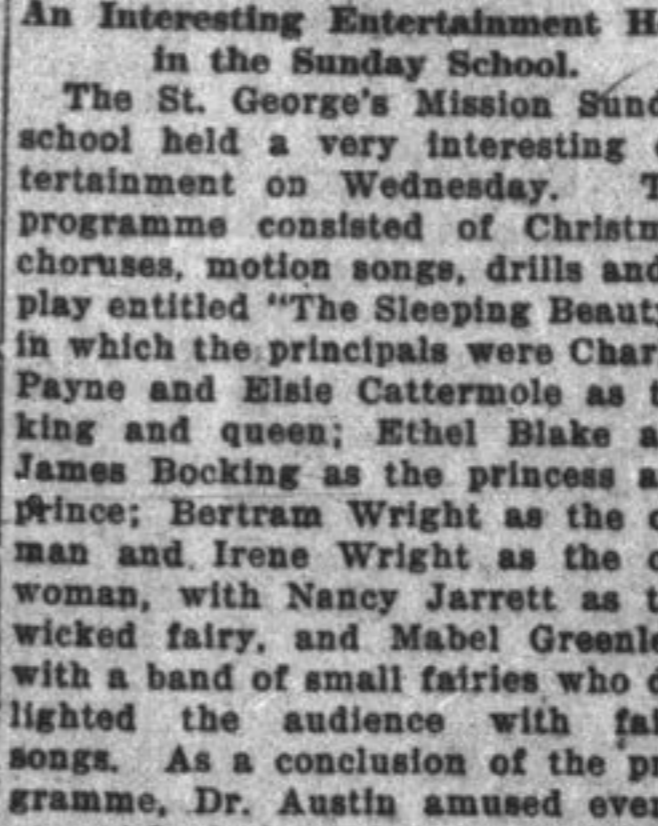

Gift Registry: Use a blank composition book for this purpose. Head one side of a double page "Gifts Sent Out," and the opposite side "Gifts Received." Be sure to describe each gift clearly, giving the name to whom sent, or from whom received. Next Christmas you will be glad you kept so perfect a record, to help you with your selection of Christmas gifts for that year. A Valuable Decorations Box is another thing which you will find helpful a year from now. For this purpose use an old hatbox, or any spacious cardboard box. Into it put any Christmas decorations which are still good, after having been used—red tissue paper bells, the bow of ribbon from your doorway wreath, small figures of Santa Claus perhaps used on the Christmas Dinner table, etcetera. Anything especially dainty and perishable is worth wrapping up in cotton or other wadding, to avoid its being crushed. Tie the box, label it "Christmas Things," and store it in your attic out of the reach of the children's hands. Any decorations which you may wish to leave up till New Year's, can be put in the box a week later. But at least there will be some things to go into it at once.

Emergency Gift Trunk: One clever woman of my acquaintance has set aside a small trunk in her attic for emergency gifts. Into this chest went all the Christmas presents which she received and did not like well enough to use (we all have at least a few of that variety, don't we?) They will remain in the trunk until they can be used as birthday gifts, wedding gifts, as articles for a church fair, or for some unforeseen need when it will be a blessing to have a pretty article on hand to give to some person or donate to some cause.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Kirkman, in care of the "Efficient Housekeeping" department, will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question. Be sure to use YOUR full name, street number, and the name of your city and province. —The Editor.
