WITH THREE FAMOUS EXPLORERS ON TRIPS TO THE SOUTH POLE

T. F. McLeod, Caretaker of a Sand Mine Near Kingston, Served Under Scott, Shackleton and Wild.

T. F. McLeod looks south. His heart is in the latitude above the 70's. As "the last pentoth after the water-brook," so does the mind and heart of McLeod yearn for the roar of the creeping ice-pack, the blowing of the killer whale, the thud of sub-Antarctic waters on the sides of great bergs, and the tonic of the icy spin-drift in the great frozen south.

At sea since he was fourteen, with Captain Scott in his South Pole trip on the "Terra Nova," with Shackleton in his memorable 1914-1915 voyage, and again with Shackleton in his post-war journey, McLeod has it in his blood and can't get it out.

At 51 years of age, the best he can find to do for the moment is to act as caretaker for a silica sand mine, near Kingston. He possesses little beyond his experiences. The ruthless south snatched all his papers and mementoes from him. But, carefully stored in a cloudy handkerchief, are three medals, prized not only for what they represent, but gloried over also as talismans that bind him to the south. A few years since the King pinned the last medal on the A. B. Uniform of McLeod, at Buckingham Palace, so confuting this burly Scotch able seaman that he forgot his piece, walked boldly forwards from the presence, but got out safely.

He was with Captain Scott when the latter, on return voyage from the pole, succumbed to earlier hardships. He was with Sir Ernest Shackleton when Shackleton expired in his berth on the "Quest," headed south. He built the cairn on a headland of Cumberland Bay, Island of South Georgia, Britain's farthest post south, that indicates Shackleton's resting place. He has gone through the white warfare of the south with Scott, Shackleton and Commander Wild, and he loves and reveres the memory of each of them. He wonders where Wild is now, and how he can get in touch with him.

A Simple Sailor. McLeod is simplicity itself. Not two people in or about Kingston know he was one of the hardy self-sacrificing hands that carried the flag into new continents. He is not a sailor trick. He does not hitch his trousers, spit at the stove, and launch into picturesque narrative brimful of wonders. He looks at visitor solemnly, tamps the tobacco down in his pipe with a right hand mangled by the frost, and gets along slowly and haltingly. The south has simplified and humbled him. Later on, if the weather about Kingston gets cold, he will take to mitts; so far, he has not needed them. He chose the last 25 below zero, he there, to go out for a long stroll. The winter he rather likes, because on some days there is cold that can be felt. On the whole, however, it is too balmy for him. It is intimated in his narrative that hunger, cold and death compose together no fear for the man obsessed with the south. McLeod would go back tomorrow if he could.

He was born at Stornoway, Island of Lewis, in the outer Hebrides, north of Scotland, and he calls himself a Highlander. At fourteen he shipped to sea. He has been all over the world in many ships, whaling in Greenland amongst the rest. When he heard that Captain Scott was preparing a second Antarctic expedition, he volunteered by letter. He was accepted, owing to his strong "letters," or recommendations, and he joined Scott on the "Terra Nova," and made his first trip south with that famed commander. Scott would have been the discoverer of the south pole, had not Amundsen, in his sledge dash, beaten out Scott, to the pole, by a matter of days.

A big bronze medal was presented to McLeod by the Royal Geographical Society, in commemoration of his three-year trip with Scott.

Salvation Army Services. The services in the Salvation Army Citadel on Sunday were conducted by Adjutant Porter, of the Trade Department, of the Salvation Army, Toronto. He was assisted in the service by Ensign Madel Wilson, of New York, a daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Wilson of Kingston. Capt. Granger, of New York, former bandmaster of the Salvation Army band here, was also present. In the morning, Adjutant Porter chose as his text, "Peter's Denial," and in the evening, "Behold Your God." Special music was rendered by the band. The selection, "Heavenly Treasures," was conducted by Bandmaster Otten, and the selection, "Eventide," by Bandmaster Granger. There were large congregations present at both services.

Fine Singing Enjoyed. The anthem of Princess Street church choir, Sunday morning and evening, were very fine and especially the duet of Messrs. Harold Wistlin and L. W. Lohy. The Stewards administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper to perhaps the largest number in the history of the church. The brief season of fellowship at the close of the evening service was well attended and very helpful.

Trade is brisk in France, despite political differences.

MORE DETAILS ABOUT C.N.R. TRAIN CHANGES

Early Evening Train From Toronto Will Reach Kingston About 6 O'clock.

The management of the Canadian National railway intimates that it gave the matter very careful consideration before making the changes in the railway service, affecting Kingston, as outlined in the Whig on Saturday. The company wishes to give the best service, but at the same time is keeping in mind the saving of as much money as possible.

For many years the Bay of Quinte line and later the Canadian National had an agreement with the Canadian Pacific Railway company which allowed certain trains to run over the C.P.R. line from Harrowsmith to Kingston. It is claimed that C.N.R. has felt for some time that a considerable sum of money could be saved annually if their trains did not run over the C.P.R. from Harrowsmith to Kingston. With this in mind, some years ago the Kingston-Tweed train which came to Kingston by way of Harrowsmith, was routed by way of Napanee. This change meant that the people living at Newburgh, Camden East, Napanee and points on the C.N.R. line between Napanee and Kingston were able to come to Kingston on a morning train. Due to this change, it is claimed that the company was able to get increased business.

The Tweed train used to leave Kingston at 5.30 p.m. and people living along the line were able to get the city edition of the Kingston papers that evening.

According to the new arrangement, which went into effect on Sunday, January 3rd, the Kingston-Tweed train will leave the Kingston city station at 2.45 p.m. and the outer station at 3.00 p.m.

When the change was first considered, it was seen that the time table of Ottawa City train would have to be changed, if people from Ottawa were to go and come from Ottawa by the Canadian National. With this in view, it was decided that the Ottawa train which formerly left Toronto about 12.00 p.m. and met the local train from Ottawa at Harrowsmith about 4.15 p.m. would have to be changed. The Ottawa train which is known as No. 6 will now leave Toronto at 1.30 p.m. and will meet the train from Ottawa known as No. 5 at Napanee about 5.00 p.m.

Instead of the Kingston-Tweed train carrying the mail from Kingston at 2.45 p.m., it has been arranged that the afternoon mail train No. 9, which leaves the Kingston inner station at 3.40 p.m. and the outer station at 3.55 p.m., will carry all the mail as far as Napanee. The mail will be transferred to No. 6 from Toronto and carried as far as Yarker, where the Kingston-Tweed train is scheduled to wait for one hour and ten minutes, and take the Tweed mail. It will also be possible for passengers for Tweed and other points along that line to take the 3.40 p.m. as far as Napanee, transfer to No. 6 at Napanee and then board the Kingston-Tweed train at Yarker. Under this arrangement, it will mean that the stop over in Kingston for people who come to do their shopping will be only one hour and forty minutes less than formerly.

Passengers from Ottawa for Kingston will transfer at Napanee to train No. 28 from Toronto, which will be due at the Kingston C.N.R. outer station at 3.58 p.m., twenty-eight minutes later than formerly. So as to make this connection, it has been necessary to change the running time of train No. 38 which left Toronto about 8.00 p.m. and reached the outer station at 7.10 p.m. It will be seen that this train will reach Kingston one hour and twelve minutes earlier.

It is claimed that the C.N.R. will make a great saving, as the Kingston-Tweed train, which was formerly used to carry the passengers from Kingston to Harrowsmith at 10.30 to make Toronto and Ottawa connections will not be used. This train upon arrival from Tweed will remain at the round house.

OBITUARY

Late Mrs. William Anderson.

It was with regret that many citizens learned that Mrs. Isabella Nesbitt, wife of William Anderson, of the firm of Anderson Bros., Limited, had passed to rest on Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. The deceased was taken ill on Tuesday last with a paralytic stroke, but she was conscious until Friday, when another stroke followed, and she slept away.

The late Mrs. Anderson will be greatly missed by the large circle of friends which she made during the forty years of her residence in Kingston. She was always thinking of some good that she might do for some person less fortunate than herself or for people on their sick beds. Her acts of kindness were innumerable. It was not only at the Christmas season that she demonstrated her spirit of good will, but she was ever mindful of others. One of her last acts was to leave instructions for the carrying out of certain plans which she herself had been unable to carry out to a successful termination. Her sympathies were wide, her charities dispensed without ostentation and her helpfulness in a score of ways, will be remembered by those who felt her gracious goodness. Beloved, and esteemed by a wide circle of friends, her memory will abide for her sweetness of life and her abounding regard on all who suffered. Truly she displayed in her life Christian virtues and womanly graces.

As a business woman, the late Mrs. Anderson had few equals. When her husband, William Anderson, went into partnership with his brother Edward, in the business then located at the head of Queen street, she was keenly interested in the new venture; and her interest continued when the place of business was moved to the corner of Princess and Division streets twenty-two years ago. She lived to see the business grow from a small grocery to one of the largest retail and wholesale concerns in eastern Ontario.

For forty years, Mrs. Anderson was a member of Cooke's Presbyterian Church and took an active interest in the welfare of the different church organizations. Last May, she with her husband, transferred their church membership to St. Andrew's Presbyterian church.

The deceased was the daughter of the late James Nesbitt, and was born in Ireland where her parents died. Forty years ago she came to Canada and four years after her arrival in the new land she was married to William Anderson. Mrs. Anderson was a sister of the late Robert Nesbitt, who was chief of police of Kingston for some years.

Mrs. Anderson is survived by her husband, one daughter, Mrs. Andrew Nesbitt, Kingston, and one brother and one sister, who live in Ireland.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, on Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock at Cataragui cemetery. Rev. J. W. Stephens, pastor of St. Andrew's church, will conduct the service.

Late Mrs. William Ferguson. The funeral of the late Mrs. William Ferguson was held from her late residence on Friday at 2 o'clock at Cataragui cemetery. Service was held at the home by the Rev. W. T. G. Brown, of Sydenham street United Church, of which the deceased was a member. She was the youngest daughter of the late George and Elizabeth Gibson of Sunbury, and lived for a number of years in this city, being well known and highly esteemed by many friends.

Left to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother are, her husband, one daughter, Mrs. F. Morley, Cataragui; two sons, Charles E. of this city, and Stanley F., of Detroit, Mich.; also one sister, Mrs. J. McGarvey, Mount Chisney and two brothers, Samuel of Portage la Prairie, Man., and William of Athens.

The remains were placed in the vault to await interment in the spring.

Death of a Child.

The death occurred on Sunday following a short illness in Toronto Wellesley hospital, of Mary Jordan, twin daughter of Dr. Dennis Jordan and Mrs. Jordan, 290 Danforth avenue, Toronto. A private funeral will be held at the above address on Tuesday evening, and interment will take place at Stratford on Wednesday. W. S. Calvert, former M.P. for Middlesex and Professor W. G. Jordan of Queen's University, Kingston, are grandfathers. Deep sympathy will be felt for those bereaved.

Late Mrs. Thomas Marshall.

On Monday morning, Mrs. Thomas Marshall, formerly Mary McMahon, Albert street, passed away after an illness of nearly a year, which she bore with Christian fortitude. Always of a cheerful disposition, she never complained and was never more happy than when surrounded by her friends.

She was a member of Princess Street United Church, where she will be greatly missed. She was also a member of Louise Rebekah Lodge, No. 16, and of the Frontenac Chapter Order of the Eastern Star.

Besides her husband, she is survived by an only sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Holder, of William street, and one brother, Mr. Robert McMahon, also resident of William street. The funeral will take place from her late residence at Cataragui cemetery, on Wednesday afternoon. The service will be conducted by Rev. F. K. Curtis, pastor of Princess Street church.

Evangelistic Services.

Rev. H. B. Luck conducted the services on Sunday in the Free Methodist Church. Rev. Mr. Luck was pastor of the Free Methodist Church here about fifteen years ago, remaining here for three years. For the last twelve years he has been in charge in the west. He will conduct evangelistic services each evening in the Free Methodist Church for two weeks.

Bare Legs Banned.

The local ban on bare legs did not interfere with the Pavlova matinee for Miss Elsie D'Arcy, who usually performs the Anitra dance, wore tights and sandals.

Pavlova's manager stated that although the great dancer regarded the ban as absurd she was too great an artist and too jealous of her reputation to allow any member of her company to offend the public taste.

Signs of the revival of the British film industry are the publication of a scheme for a British "Hollywood" near here, and the announcement of a contract between a British firm and an American company for the distribution of British films in America.
