Answer to Saturday's Crossword Puzzle.

at more distant points is evidenced by the fact that it became necessary to hold, not only the yearly (business) meeting, and, later, the half-yearly meeting, but the more frequent quarterly meeting, as gleaned from the extract under date of the 14th day of the 9th month of the year 1848, which speaks for itself, "that henceforth four quarterly meetings shall be held, two at West Lake (Prince Edward county) one at Leeds (now Yonge township) and one at Kingston, each year.

The ministers and workers of that day were, for the most part, farmers, hence busy people, and in very moderate circumstances, yet their strenuous spiritual labors were undertaken gratuitously for the love of humanity, and the salvation of souls. If financially able to do so, they became responsible for their own incidental expenses, but, if assistance were necessary, the people gave of their scanty means for the use of the travelling evangelist. In these days of stipulated stipends, and circumscribed circuits it is a revelation to note such items as these in the minutes occasionally. "Our esteemed friend, Harvey Derbyshire, opened, in this meeting, a prospect he had of visiting, in company with the meetings, composing New England Yearly Meeting, and also of holding some meetings among others not of our Society, with which there was much sympathy and unity expressed, and, having the unity of the Women's meeting therein, he is left to pursue his prospect as truth opens the way, he being a minister in unity with us, and, as such, we commend him to the sympathy of Friends wherever he may come, hoping that he may be enabled to fulfill his prospect, and return to his family with rewards of peace." A similar item appears with reference to Johnston Brewer, also a minister who journeyed far beyond the limits of the Canada Yearly Meeting. Apparently those early days were not lacking in romance, for notices of Quaker marriages frequently intercept the usual routine of business mentioned in the minutes, and add their piquant interest, as one, in imagination, weaves in the story of those ardent swains wooing the demure young Quakeresses, in those pioneer days.

The Society of Friends, as a denomination, has ceased to exist here, but the remembrance of these pious people in their quaint march is as incense poured forth, and the impress of their godly lives still remains, not only in our own community, but also beyond in the great world outside.

THE SOCIETY OF FRIENDS

Early Years in Eastern Ontario—An Article by Mrs. Louise Towriss, Athens.

Each nation, throughout the history of the world, has contributed something of permanent value to the race, and France, in this regard, is no exception to the rule, having produced scientists, artists, and artisans of no mean rank. We, of Canada, are debtors to the French—those dauntless pioneers—who, feeling the virgin forests and braving the rigors of our northern winters, laid the foundations of a new colony. Of heroic mould were their Jesuit priests, who endured privations, that they might propagate their faith in the New World, and thrilling tales have come down to us of their sacrifice and their martyrdom. To a Frenchman, too, we owe the establishment, in this part of Canada, of the Society of Friends, an organization so instrumental in spreading the gospel of peace and goodwill, and so conducive to the welfare and unity among men.

Stephen Grollet du Mabilier was born in the city of Limoges, France, in 1773, his family being people of rank among the nobility, but, during the troublous times of the French Revolution, his father and mother were imprisoned, while Stephen and his brother, Joseph, fled to Holland, thence to South America, (where a Dutch colony had unsafe established). Finding it unsafe there, they made their way to New York, where, shortly after, Stephen became identified with the Society of Friends, devoting himself subsequently to the ministry of that body.

Comes to Canada. In 1804 he decided to come to Canada, arriving in the Lower Province, and proceeding about one hundred, and fifty miles up the river, over very bad roads—or rather Indian paths—the journey being made on horse-back. Arriving in what is now Grenville county, his companion turned back, and he was forced to face the hardships alone. This pioneer preacher tells how he travelled on for thirty-two miles farther, over deep muddy roads, through thick woods, where fallen trees would often force him to turn aside—thereby missing his way—but, though the sun was obscured, by observing the moss on the trees, he was able to direct his course, and, over the solitary way wherein he saw no living thing save the creatures of the wood, he guided his faithful horse, until, after two days, he arrived at the home of Matthew Howard, where he received much kindness. This hospitable home was, quite probably, situated near the present site of Brockville, for Mr. Grollet mentions that his host accompanied him fourteen miles farther to another settlement of the Wing's (near the present town of Athens) where he found several who had a right of membership with the Society of Friends. Next day, he held a meeting with them, which was probably the first meeting of its kind to be held in this part of Canada, encouraging them to meet together, as a little company, for Divine worship, at least once a week. Apparently his advice was heeded, for he mentions that some time later, when re-visiting Canada, he found a large body of Friends settled in that neighborhood, constituting the Leeds Monthly Meeting.

Leeds Monthly Meeting. The history of the aforesaid Leeds Monthly Meeting (where the village of Farmersville—later, Athens—sprang up) remained as enigma until recently, when there was found, in the house now owned and occupied by A. M. Eaton, corner of Main and Sarah streets, an old minute book of the Society, with records dating from 1838 to 1855, and, as there was great rejoicing among the Jews of old when, in the eighteenth year of the reign of King Josiah, the high priest, Hilkiah, found the lost book of the law, so, among the descendants of those devoted Friends of the past, there is now great rejoicing, for certain missing links in the early history of that denomination have at last been discovered. The house, where this treasure was located, was for long years the home of the late Arza Witte, who, with his wife (lovingly termed "Aunt Sarah" by all here) were staunch supporters of the cause in this locality. The record begins on the 10th day of the 5th month of the year 1838, and covers a period of seventeen eventful years, the minutes being written by four different "clerks," the office being filled by annual appointment. The first clerk, whose handwriting appears, was David Witte, a great uncle of Mrs. Ruth Riley, Wellington street. Another clerk was Turner Lillie, grandfather of Dr. C. B. Lillie, Main street, another was Otis Smith, great-grandfather of Mrs. Elizabeth Stevens, and Mrs. (Rev.) J. E. Robeson, Elgin street; another was Philip Wing a great-grand-uncle of George Robinson, but recently moved from Elgin street to Sheldon's Corners.

Meeting at Kingston. A minute entered on the 11th day of the 6th month of the year 1848 states that a request had come from Kingston to hold a preparative meeting in that place, and it was carried that the request be complied with. That the Society was well supplied with workers in the Lord's Vineyard is attested by information gleaned from the following: "It was decided that a minute be furnished to Eliza Brewer, authorizing her to visit the prison at Kingston, if truth open the way."
