A Small Home With Large Living Room

W. L. SOMERVILLE, ARCHT. TWO BLOOR, WEST.

Editor's Note—This home, designed by W. L. Somerville, Architect, of Toronto, is one of a series featuring moderate priced Canadian Homes. Copyright 1925, MacLean Building Reports, Ltd.

The client in this case had several very definite ideas of his own before he consulted the architect. He wanted a small home for a family to which the same adjective also applied, but a large living room was insisted upon.

It is 28 ft. wide by an average length of not quite 21 ft. and the living room, 22 ft. x 11 ft., is certainly an unique achievement in a house of this size.

Such is the peculiar art of architecture—to alter anything would be to probably spoil everything. Take, for another example, the stucco exterior finish of the walls. Brick cannot be substituted without special attention being devoted to the design of the brickwork and in addition to this, other changes would have to be made as well to secure a harmonious effect of the whole.

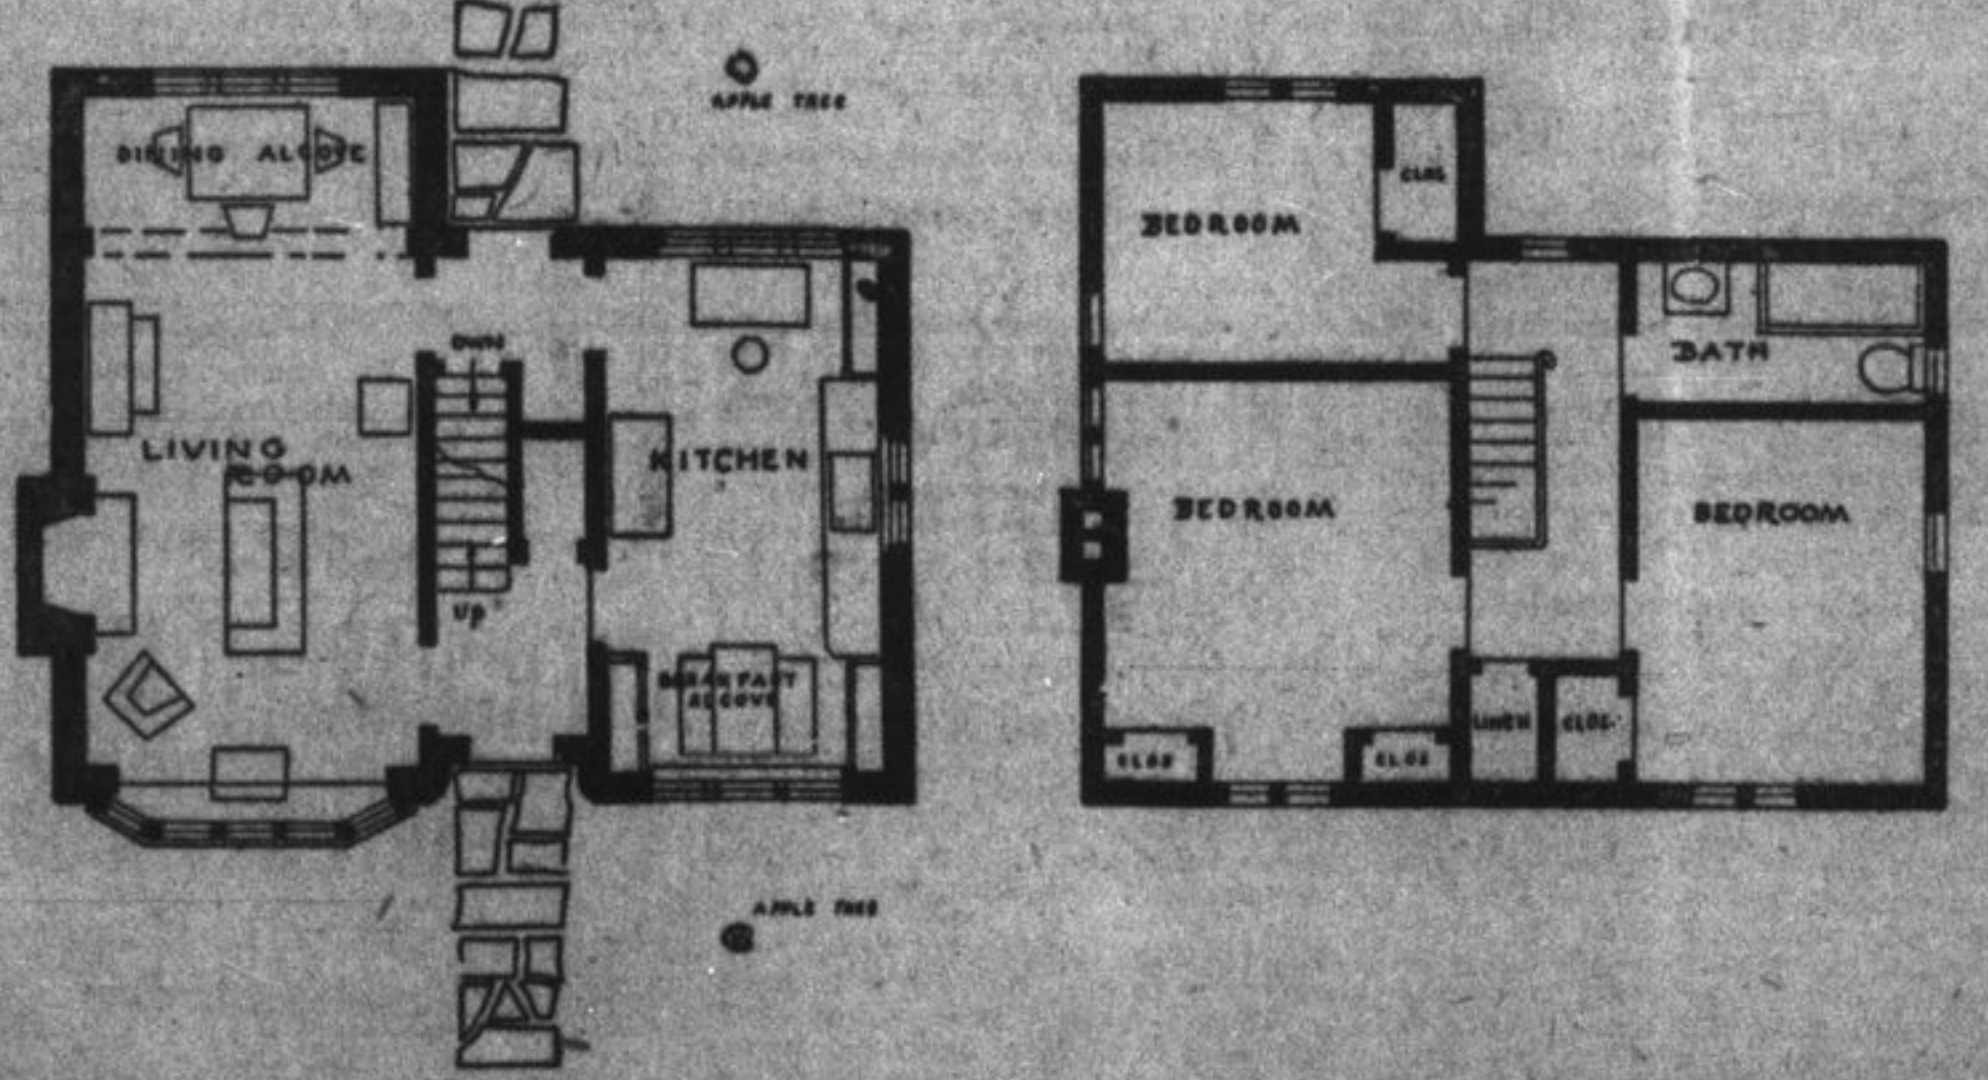

Not many kitchens, including those of much larger homes, can compete with this one in size or its consequent possibilities in the matter of placing furniture and equipment. The dimensions are 9 ft. 6 in. x 17 ft., including the breakfast alcove with its built-in seats and table, and noteworthy indeed is the fact that there is light on three sides.

Upstairs are three bedrooms, bathroom and linen closet. Two closets are provided for one of the bedrooms and the other two have the necessary, but not always the usual, one each.

When desired to and the access to rear hall and kitchen is very well arranged. The fireplace and big bay window, in conjunction with an artistic arrangement of furniture, will present a delightful view from the front hall.

Allowing for a side drive and two or three feet margin on the other side, a forty foot lot would be sufficient for this home but it should face the south. Slight changes in the plan could be made by the architect to adapt it to a western exposure but, well there you are again—change it and the result will not be quite so satisfactory, even if the changing is in the hands of the architect.

Got to understand the lad—He's not so eager to be bad; If the right he always knew, He would be as old as you; Were he now exceedingly wise, He'd be just another your size; When he does things that annoy, Don't forget he's just a boy.

Could he know and understand, He would need no guiding hand, But he's young and hasn't learned, How life's corner must be turned; Doesn't know from day to day, There is more in life than play, More to face than selfish joy— Don't forget he's just a boy.

Being just a boy he'll do, Much you do not want him to, He'll be as careless in his ways, Have his disobedient days, Wild, wild and headstrong, too; Just as, when a boy, were you; Things of value he'll destroy, But reflect, he's just a boy.

Just a boy who needs a friend, Patient, kindly to the end; Needs a father who will show Him all he wants to know, Take him with you when you walk, Listen when he wants to talk, His companionship enjoy, Don't forget he's just a boy.

A LONDON LETTER

London, Eng., Jan. 19.—"Fragments of cork compressed into sheets are being used in a novel method of building houses that has been devised by Dr. A. P. Laurie, Principal of the Heriot Watt College, Edinburgh," says a correspondent of the London Times.

For some time past he has been making experiments on inner lining and partition walls. Most of the new systems of which so much has been heard are for building the external walls of a house that are usually made of brick, steel, concrete, or wood.

The novelty of the method is that he has apparently devised a substantial internal wall that is said to be as solid as sound-proof, and at least equally as durable as the normal brick and plaster wall, and is also a good non-conductor of heat and sound.

Dr. Laurie's method of construction has been patented and taken up by a commercial company in Scotland, where it has attracted a good deal of attention among architects and builders, and those responsible for housing schemes.

"British Shopping Week." "Shopping Week" is becoming popular as the result of an appeal made by Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, President of the Board of Trade; Neville Chamberlain, Minister of Health, and the Secretary of State for Scotland, Sir John Gilmour, shortly before the last Christmas season.

In addition much is being done to forward the movement to "Buy British Goods" by the prominent exhibition of Empire-produced articles. A feature of the recent Christmas window dressing in London and in practically all the important centres was the display of British goods.

London Zoo has secured a South African "jumping hare" which when pursued, can leap thirty feet.

band of fellow-students, decorated a big London hotel for the year-end festivities, thereby earning a prize of 100 guineas. This was the first venture of British artists into a lucrative field hitherto monopolized by Continental painters and designers.

Taylor is a student at the Royal College of Art. He entered the competition for the prize because it seemed to be in his line. His art studies included decorative work, a new feature of art training in England.

So in future, instead of a few Union Jacks in the streets on big occasions, London may have some really interesting decorative schemes, if British artists and students follow up the possibilities of this line of study.
