ENGINEERING SOCIETY OF QUEEN'S DINNER

George A. Walkem and George C. Mackenzie Were the Chief Speakers.

That Captain John Donnelly of this city was one of the very first students in what is now the Faculty of Applied Science at Queen's University, then the class in practical mining, was brought out by Geo. A. Walkem, president of the Engineering Institute of Canada, speaking at the twenty-fifth annual dinner of the Engineering Society of Queen's University on Wednesday night. The speeches and entertainment were of a very high order and the cuisine was quite in keeping with the other features of the programme.

The toast to "The University" was proposed by D. R. MacLeod who called on the gathering to drink to the best there was in education not only in Canada but in the world. Principal R. Bruce Taylor responded stating that the University by a grant of $100,000 had made the Students' Union a possibility and he asked the co-operation of the science students in bringing to a successful issue what under the most favorable circumstances would be an almost overwhelming task: the Queen's Endowment Campaign.

That they didn't know all that they thought they did in Chicago. He quoted Dr. Bruce of Queen's University as the authority for declaring unpracticable the plan for damming the Albany and several other rivers and thus forming a big lake which would feed into Lake Superior and supply the water that the Chicago Canal was draining away. "You will find when you get out that you will have to look after yourselves to a certain extent," he said, speaking to the students, "and don't believe all that the faculty tell you in saying good-bye. You will have to learn for yourselves. If you want to forge ahead and advance yourself, get to know the men in your own profession for that's your bread and butter." R. W. Dryborough extended the official welcome to the guests on behalf of the Engineering Society. In responding to the toast to "Our Guests," George A. Walkem, an old Kingstonian and a member of the legislature of British Columbia also a part-time member of the faculty of the University of British Columbia, traced the history of scientific knowledge from the earliest times. He spoke of such wonderful engineering accomplishments as the pyramids and he endeavored to give the students a glimpse of the labor of the men in the early ages who had worked out scientific problems and had made possible a course in applied science. He made the prediction that in ten years' time only 25 per cent. of the men who graduated in engineering would be working at their profession. He looked on this condition as one eminently to be desired because he thought that the scientific training which the students were getting would better fit them for a commercial life than any training which a commercial course could give. J. N. Anderson proposed the toast to the "Sister Universities" and W. P. C. LeBouthillier, of R.M.C., Donald Bay, of Varsity, and William James, of McGill, responded. The Queen's Collegians supplied the music during the dinner and others who contributed to the programme were: George Kettladas, Science '29 Sextette, and Bert Parsons and G. Baldwin. The committee in charge of the arrangements of the dinner were: H. Brookline, H. Haslam, J. H. Pettit, C. A. Ryan, J. Howard, D. R. MacLeod and R. A. Low. Hon. J. R. Cook was to have been the speaker of the evening but owing to the fact that the Legislature opened on Wednesday he was not able to be present. HORSE NOW USED. For Stage Route at Ardoch Owing to Snowstorm. Ardoch, Feb. 10.—Pike fishing through the ice on Malcolm Lake is being indulged in. The trappers report poor luck. Whooping cough is still raging. The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Schoener is seriously ill. Miss Katie Doyle, Corvale, spent over Sunday at George Weber's. John Fraser was in Plevna on Monday auditing the township books. Mrs. Lorne McDonald is indisposed by an attack of rheumatism, and Mrs. John Myers and Grace Weber are victims of pneumonia. Dr. Suddaby, of Sharbot Lake, was called to see the former. Owing to the recent snowstorms James Derue, Jr., proprietor of the stage route, was forced to put his car in storage and engage Allan Watkins as driver for his team. Gravel is being hauled in preparatory to the spring's repairing of the roads. Miss Florence Keeler, of Ralston, was called to see her sister, Mrs. Myers, and will act as nurse. Miss Mary Gunginger visited at Mrs. Catherine Fraser's a few days. Miss Mildred Hartman has gone to reside with her grandfather, Lawrence Schoener for a short time, as his former housekeeper. Miss Zilda Hartman, is at Robert Lemke's.

STANTIAL BACKING. Trademark of the L. E. Waterman Company, Limited. It costs about fifty dollars to register a trademark; but it costs many thousands of dollars in equipment, craftsmanship and sales effort to make a trademark of any tangible worth. It is not the trademark itself; but what the symbol stands for in the public mind, that gives it real value. The trademark of the L. E. Waterman Company Limited carries with it more than a guarantee of a thoroughly satisfactory fountain pen. It is also an assurance of service. Since the inception of the Waterman Company, way back in 1883, it has been the policy to build a substantial background for the pen. This has been accomplished by the construction of Waterman buildings where service stores are maintained. Starting with the original "Pen Corner" at 191 Broadway, New York, Waterman buildings have been erected in Montreal, Chicago, Boston and San Francisco, with a European headquarters at the famous "Pen Corner" in Kingsway, London. The establishment of these buildings in Canada, the United States and Great Britain enables the Waterman Company to render a very practical and intimate service to the millions of users of Waterman pens. The substantial investments in buildings are convincing evidence of the stability of the company whose trademark guarantees the pen.

Canada's Sandhurst. The announcement that the celebration of the golden jubilee of the Royal Military College of Canada, situated at Kingston, is to be accompanied by a great reunion of graduates to be held during the month of June, leads to the observation that, included in the group of students who formed the nucleus of the college fifty years ago and who graduated in 1880, there were three young men rather closely associated with the town of Brockville, says the Recorder and Times. These were Harry Corliandt Frost, Victor Brewster Rivers and John Bray Cochrane, all three members of leading Brockville families of the time and of whom the last alone survives.
