Miss Greta Carlisle, 23 Leonard St., Brantford, Ont., writes: "A short while ago, my face was completely covered with large red pimples, and it seemed that it was almost impossible for me to get rid of them, as nothing I took seemed to do me any good. One day I noticed an advertisement of Burdock Blood Bitters.

THE YELLOW STUB
GREAT NEW MYSTERY SERIAL
By Ernest Lynn

CHAPTER XXVI
Jimmy, studying the letter, frowned. It was written in the same large, scrawly hand as the first one. "This is your last chance," it said. "Either leave town in three days or they'll be carrying you out in a pine box."

"Did you ask him who sent it?" "No, I don't, Mrs. King. I'm puzzled about it. It's an anonymous letter from someone who seems intent on having me leave town. It's the second one I've found in my room. You remember that evening I came home and you told me you thought you had heard me moving around in my room upstairs?"

"Well, I found one that night. I was in the laundry office, he found that the man named Porter had left word with the delivery clerk that a new driver would report. The clerk in shirt sleeves and vest, a pencil stuck behind his ear, asked a few questions and issued some brief instructions.

"Now you look like a pretty bright fellow," Jimmy smiled, and the man continued. "Mr. Porter said he thought you had taken this job because you needed work and that you might quit as soon as you found something better. I want to tell you right now that this is no blind alley job. A man who's on his toes all the time and who gets up new business will find advancement waiting for him. Besides, there's a commission offered for new regular customers. This is a young concern and there's room here for brains. That's just a friendly tip. Now get out and see how it goes."

"Here's your route," he handed Jimmy a sheaf of papers. "Know the city?" "Fairly well," "Well, I've taken the trouble to lay out your route for you so you can cover it in the least time. Good luck."

"Looks like a pretty bright guy," remarked the clerk to a fellow worker as Jimmy climbed into the truck. "No foolish questions, like some of the dumbbells that come in here. A lot of these morons that claim to be truck drivers can't be trusted to wheel a baby carriage, much less run an automobile."

"What a world!" remarked Jimmy, and laughed. He had driven out of the delivery barn and was actually launched upon his new and most interesting job. He wondered what his mother and Janet would think if they could see him, wondered what Barry Colvin would think and what his thoughts took their invariably ended up with Mary Lowell.

perhaps two and a half years tugged at her dress; another and younger baby sat in a high chair, eating cereal. "Laundry, ma'am," he said, offering the bundle. "Three dollars and a quarter."

"Oh yes. Wait a minute and I'll get the money. Won't you come in?" "What's your name, little man?" he asked the boy as the woman went into another room.

"Glad to wait. No trouble." While she gathered up the clothes Harry delighted his new visitor by reciting "Little Boy Boo, tum b'ow you horn." Jimmy was vastly entertained and received a grave handshake and an invitation to come again when he told Harry goodby.

He gave a sudden start. It was Samuel Church at the wheel, and Church was looking at him, his lips curled in a sneering smile. Traffic started again, and Church turned to his companion. It was then that Jimmy saw it was Mary with him, and she was facing him directly, but looking through him—not at him.

Good Health for All the Family
Mrs. Mary Foursie, Larry's River, N.S. writes: "I was troubled with constipation for years. At last a friend suggested that I try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I did so and must say that they have given me more relief than all the medicine I have taken during the last ten years."
