I tried 2 or 3 different remedies, but they didn't help me any, so one day a friend, who had been troubled the same as I was, advised me to use

THE YELLOW STUB

GREAT NEW MYSTERY SERIAL
By Ernest Lynn

Henry Rand, 55, a business man, is found murdered in a cheap hotel in Grafton. Police find a woman's handkerchief and the stub of a yellow theatre ticket.

Janet Rand, his daughter, breaks her engagement with Barry Colvin because of the "disgrace." Jimmy Rand, his son, goes to Chicago, where the theatre is. The stub is traced to Thomas Fogarty, a political boss, who says he gave it to Olga Maynard, a cabaret singer.

Jimmy meets and falls in love with Mary Lowell. Later he encounters Olga. She faints at hearing police want her for murder. Mary, out with Samuel Church, a wealthy lawyer, sees Jimmy lift Olga into a taxi and misunderstands.

Olga tells police the stub might have come into possession of a man who "picked her up" two nights before the murder. Jimmy receives mysterious warnings to leave Chicago and later is attacked at night by two men, but escapes.

With Jimmy and Mary, estranged, Church gets Mary's promise to marry him. Mary tells Jimmy this when they meet and he, trying to hurt her, accuses her of marrying for money.

That evening Jimmy and Olga see, in an auto, a man they both recognize—she as the man who got the stub, he as one of his attackers. The man and his companion escape. Later they recognize his police picture as that of Ike Jensen.

Church, out driving with Mary, runs over a dog. His heartless kindness hatred in her and she breaks their engagement. The next day he attempts a reconciliation at her office but fails. On the street he encounters Jimmy, who offers his hand in congratulation, Church snarls and turns away.

Harry we called him in those days. He was a proud man, a cold man. I recall my father saying that Thaddeus Rand had come from Virginia and that he boasted that his ancestors had been among the original settlers of Virginia.

"At any rate we all knew that he was proud of his name and he was proud of his name as the Cavalier forefathers." O'Day got up from his chair. "I want another cigar. Let's go in the living room where it's more comfortable."

He installed Jimmy in an easy chair and sat heavily in a rocker. Mrs. O'Day, finished with the dinner dishes, produced a sewing basket and sat in the dining room, knitting.

O'Day, after lighting a fresh cigar, went on with his story. "It's important that you know what a proud sort of man your grandfather was, Rand, so you'll understand the things he did. I can see his reason now, although at the time there didn't seem to be any excuse at all for what he did."

"Thaddeus Rand ran the only drug store in town. If he'd had any competition he wouldn't have got much business, for it wasn't a pleasure to deal with him. He was never a mixer, like most small town business men, but kept to himself as much as possible. When you went in his drug store you told him what you wanted and you got it. That's all there was to it. He was polite enough, but strictly business. I used to drink sodas in his store when I was a little shaver. That's one reason why I remember him so well."

"I don't know how old your father—Harry Rand—was when Thaddeus came to Durbin, but he was just a little kid and he grew up with the rest of the boys and went to school with 'em. Unlike his father, he was a regular boy into every sort of mischief that red-blooded boys got into, and a fond of playing pranks. He was a ring leader in all the sports and he was generally looked up to by all the other village boys. People used to wonder how Thaddeus Rand, with his cold, proud ways, could have such a son."

"It's hard," said Jimmy, blinking. "It's hard for me to imagine anyone calling my father Harry. As we knew him, Henry was about the only thing that suited him. A quiet little man, you know, in his gray suits and his derby hat—and his unfailing punctuality."

"No doubt," said O'Day. "There was enough happened to him in his early years to change him and make a different man of him. But I'll go on."

"Well, the years sort of moved along, and Thaddeus Rand still kept his drug store, making a fair living out of it, as proud as ever. He was as strict as sin with your father. Made him work in the drug store after school hours and never let him out at night. It's a wonder the lad ever found time to play at all, but that he did, somehow, as I was telling you."

"Thaddeus Rand didn't want his son mixing so free with the other boys. He had a notion that a Rand was too good for the rest of us. But Harry couldn't see it that way. He made many friends."

"I guess he was in his second or third year of high school—about sixteen years old—when he got in his scrape. He fell in love, and he fell hard. One of these schoolboy infatuations, you understand, but which are no laughing matter at all when you're got one. It just about swept Harry Rand off his feet."

"God! It's hard to realize that," exclaimed Jimmy softly. "My father in a school boy love affair?"

"We've all had them, Rand, some of them mild cases and some of them pretty violent. Your father was no exception. You didn't know your dad very well."

"No, I didn't, and I'm sorry."

"Well, this thing had been growing for about a year. She was a year or so younger than Harry, a year behind him in school. . . . A beauty."

"One of these Latin types, you know—the kind that're full blown at fifteen."

"Her name was Marie Real, and she was the daughter of the town shoemaker, Angelo Real. Nobody realized, I guess, how serious it was with those two kids. He used to walk to school with her, an' home again in the afternoon. They were together all the time that he wasn't home or working in his father's store."

"Finally the thing got to be gossip; it spread all the faster, I guess, because she was the shoemaker's daughter and he was the son of proud old Thaddeus Rand. Thaddeus, when he heard about it, shut his mouth tight and had one of his silent fits. He laid down the law to Harry, absolutely forbid him to speak to the girl again."

"Then he marches down to Angelo Real's shop and lets off steam. 'You keep your daughter away from my son,' he says. 'I'll do my part; now you do yours.'

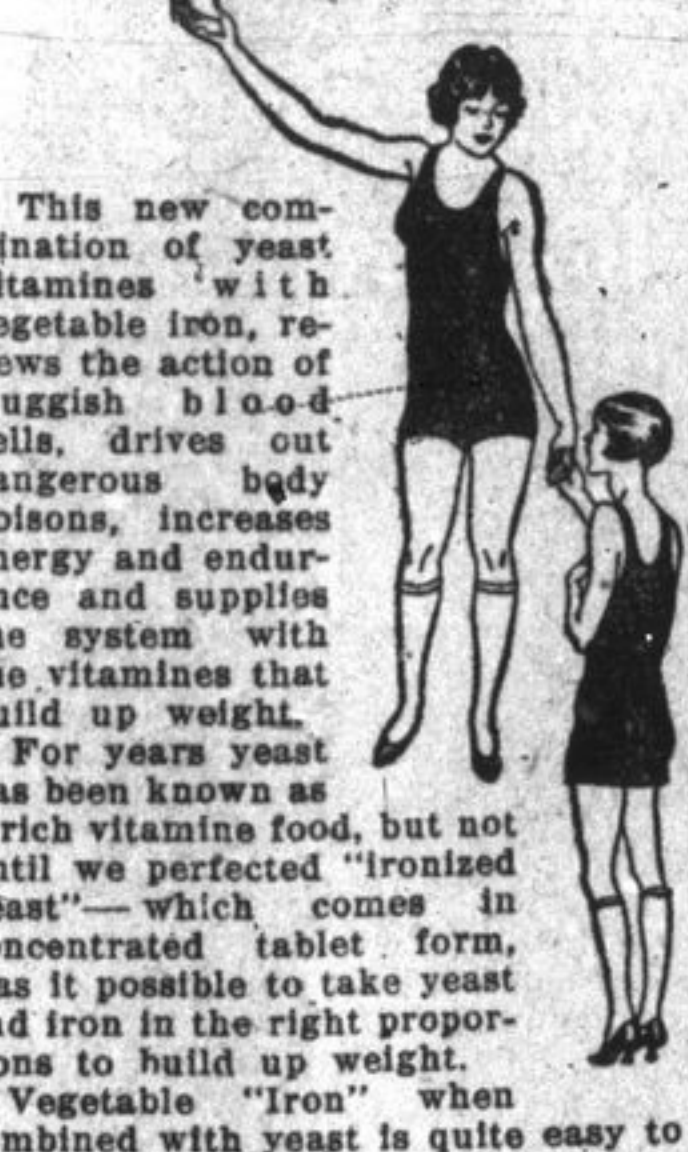

"Old Angelo gets mad himself. He didn't like Thaddeus' attitude, for which I don't blame him. 'You think my daughter's not good enough for your boy, eh?' he says to Thaddeus. 'You listen to me. I don't like it any more than you do, you hear? You think I like it, eh?'

"'I'll talk to Marie,' he says. 'You keep watch on your son. Marie's a good girl; she'll do what I say. Now you get out, an' he chases old Thaddeus out of his shop with a hammer."

"Well, it got to be talked about

Easy to Gain With Yeast and Iron

New Combination of Yeast with Vegetable Iron Quick Way to Build Up Weight

This new combination of yeast vitamins with vegetable iron, renews the action of sluggish blood cells, drives out dangerous body poisons, increases energy and endurance and supplies the system with the vitamins that build up weight.

For years yeast has been known as a rich vitamin food, but not until we perfected "ironized yeast"—which comes in concentrated tablet form, was it possible to take yeast and iron in the right proportions to build up weight.

Vegetable "iron" when combined with yeast is quite easy to digest, therefore better for the system. And "yeast" when ironized comes just twice as beneficial as ordinary fresh or cake yeast.

Ironized Yeast tablets are composed of concentrated food elements, therefore, they are pleasant to take and free from drug-like effects. If you are under weight, do not enjoy good health, lacking in energy and force, "ironized yeast" tablets will put you right up, and if they fail, you get your money back.

Sold by druggists, at $1.00 for a large 60-tablet package. Harold F. Ritchie & Co., Ltd., Toronto, Canada.

The village that Thaddeus and Angelo had had a fallin' out over their kids an' Marie an' Harry were not to speak to each other again. The kids tried hard, I guess, to be obedient children, an' for a while it looked like the thing was goin' to blow over.

"Thaddeus kept a close watch on Harry, an' kept him in the drug store every minute of the day that he wasn't in school. As for Angelo, he made his son Louis walk to school an' back with Marie every day."

"The kids stood it for a while, but the thing went a lot deeper than anybody thought. Gradually they got to stealin' a few minutes together in school, an' then it got to the note writin' stage. There were plenty of kids, girls mostly, who were willin' to carry notes between them."

"Then that was found out, an' Harry an' Marie had another talkin' to from their parents. Thaddeus, they say, even went so far as to threaten to cast Harry off if he didn't cut out his foolishness an' do it right away. The boy came to school the next mornin', lookin' pale as a ghost, with his jaw stuck out, an' said never a word."

"Mind you, I was too young at the time to know the whole story. I'm repeatin' it as it was told to me later on by my older brother, who was a classmate of Harry's."

"Marie was cryin' when she came to school the next day. Some say that old Angelo had given her a lickin', which I wouldn't put past him."

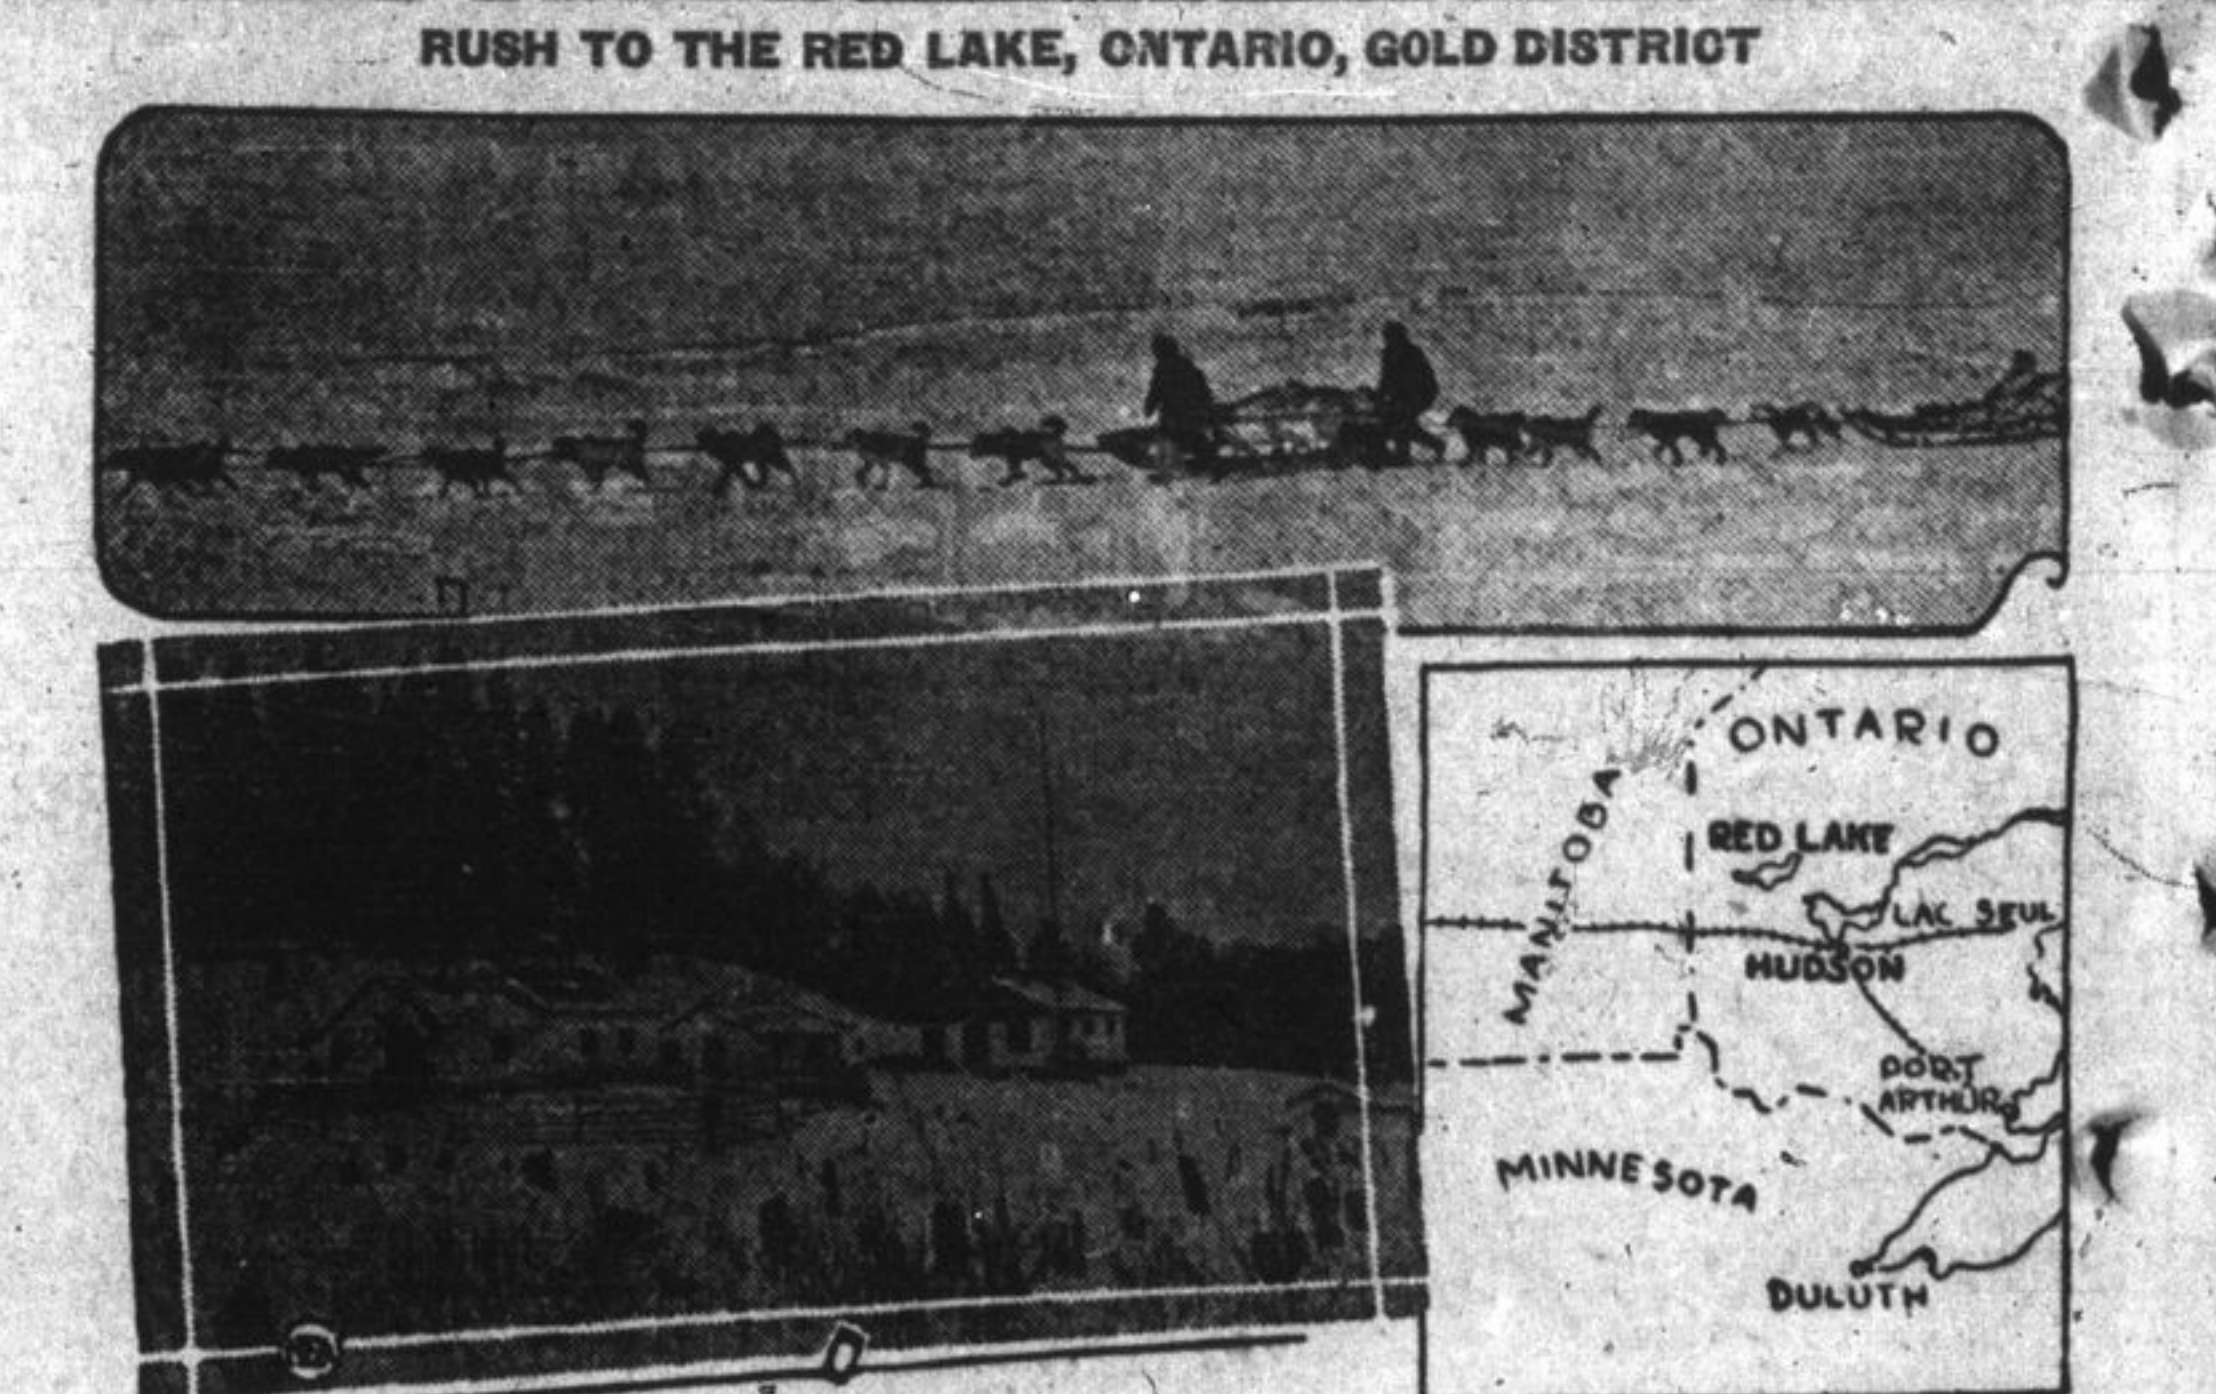

O'Day lit a fresh cigar, then settled back in his chair. He continued, looking straight at Jimmy: "They didn't treat those kids right, Rand. I hope I'm never guilty of such cruelty to my own. They didn't say a word to anybody in school that mornin', but at lunch time they had disappeared."

"They didn't show up all afternoon. When evening came, old Angelo an' Thaddeus went to the constable. They almost had a fight right in front of him, each blamin' the other, you see. They organized a searchin' party, but the kids had lit out, or killed themselves—nobody knew which. They didn't come back that night, an' the next day the whole town was lookin' for them."

"Finally they found 'em late the next afternoon. They had run away together—cloped—an' they were arrested by the police in a town about thirty miles away."

"They landed back in Durbin that night. Someone drove 'em home in a surrey. An' when they got back, Rand, there was hell to pay."

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmothers' recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product for only 75 cents. It is improved by the addition of other ingredients, and is called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

MOTHERS WHO HAVE USED BABY'S OWN TABLETS
Always Strongly Recommend Them to Other Mothers.

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little ones she will use nothing else—actual experience teaches her that there is no other medicine to equal them for any of the minor ailments from which her baby or little ones suffer. Having found the value of the Tablets in her own home, she is always anxious that other mothers should share her knowledge. That is why Mrs. Creighton White, North Noel Road, N.S., writes the following:—"I have a baby seventeen months old and have given him nothing but Baby's Own Tablets ever since he was a week old. I know of no other medicine to equal them, and it is certainly a pleasure to recommend them to other mothers."

Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative that regulates the stomach and bowels; banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and make the sickly baby well and happy again. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SNOOKS WINS HIS OWN CASE
Snooks, a pet bulldog owned by Edward Frank of Memphis, Tenn., got his master into a lawsuit—and then got him out again. Frank was sued for $5,000 by a neighbor, who claimed the dog had bitten the neighbor's boy. The dog was malicious, he charged. Frank replied that the dog bit the boy because the boy had hit him with a stick, and to prove the dog was not of an ugly disposition, led him before the jury. Snooks wagged his tail, the jury grinned—and Frank won the verdict.
