AVOIDED AN OPERATION

Mrs. Dayman Gives Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the Credit

Colborne, Ontario.—"When I was first married I was very thin and weak. The doctor said I was weak and would never be able to have a child, but I did, and from the time my baby came I suffered all the time and doctored and took medicine. Life became a burden, and doctors said an operation could help me, but my husband was opposed to that. I had seen Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine advertised, so I told my husband that I thought I would try it, that I might get some relief, if not a cure. I had not taken one bottle when I could feel it helping me. I took five bottles and had better health. Now I have three girls and a boy and have done my work up to a confinement. I am now at the change of life and owe my good health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I take a bottle when I think I need it."—Mrs. SUSAN DAYMAN, R. R. No. 5, Colborne, Ontario.

The Editor Hears

That in spite of the frosty nights and the cold wind that keep the snow on the shady side of the street, the walks are being cleared and soon will be dry enough for even the prudent to discard rubbers. But this desired result would be accomplished more quickly if householders and institutions would take the snow and ice off when the sun has melted it. They leave it on the walk for everyone to wade through and at night it freezes enough to give them excuse to say it is frozen. But all the walks in Kingston that get the morning sun could be cleared by this time if a determined effort were made.

That the Wolfe Islanders expect to see the ice in the harbor at Eastor. There is no sign of it getting thin as yet, and it takes more than two weeks generally for the harbor to clear even after the ice is weak-ening.

That the knitted frock and suit will be even more the vogue than ever this year and ensemble knitted suits with long coats are exceedingly smart and are being shown in Kingston shops.

That Kingston may have a visit from an overseas visitor of note this spring who will arrive in Montreal in the near future. This is Dame Katharine Furse, of England. Dame Katharine, at present Assistant Chief Commissioner of the Girl Guides movement, is well known for her splendid war service. She was Commander-in-Chief of the V.A.D. work in England, going to France in August, 1914, to organize the work there, Miss Rachel Crowdey accompanying her, and received the Royal Red Cross, and on her resignation, in 1917, was decorated by the King, being made a Dame of the Grand Cross of the Order of the British Empire. Dame Katharine is also a Lady of Grace of St. John. In 1917, she became director of the women's Royal Naval Service, remaining head of that band of women until the close of the war. It was then she became head of a new branch of the Girl Guide movement, known as the "Sea Guides." Dame Katharine is the widow of the late Charles Wellington Furse, an English portrait and decorative design painter of note, his father being the late Rev. C. W. Furse, Archdeacon of Westminster.

That the Toronto Liberal Women's Association have asked Premier Ferguson, among other things they feel will be of benefit to Canadian citizens, that juvenile courts be extended to other parts of the province besides the larger cities.

HER OWN WAY By a Girl of To-day.

IRISH BLOOD.

In a moment all was confusion. Sterns the manager, and Sellers, the house detective were immediately on the spot.

Horton had managed to plant one good blow in Jimmie's face, but he had caught his tooth in his lip and he was a mess in a bright red stiff bosom shirt as the detective helped him up.

Sterns tried to push Jimmie and me into his office, but the moment he laid his hand on me, Jimmie's fighting blood was up. He would have none of it. He hauled off and looked so fierce that the manager backed down.

"Young man," he said, "you can't make a rough house here. You get out and you too, young woman. You go with him. I've had quite enough trouble with you ever since you've been here. You don't seem to remember that I took you in when you were on your uppers."

"Cut it. Cut it out," said Jimmie with his fists clenched in the manager's face as he opened his face to say more. "You can make up your mind I'll be glad to get out of this blasted dump. Come on, Judy."

We started for the hat-checking counter, when the manager bellowed:

"Here, I want your name and address, young man. And, didn't I hear you call this young woman by some other name than the one she gave us?"

Jimmie looked at me in consternation. He did not know whether he had spilled the beans or not. At the sight of my face he recovered and blurted out:

"You go to hell, will you?" With this he turned and followed me to the hat rack.

"Get your hat and coat quickly, Judy. Let's get out of this. I guess we've picked up a devil of a rumpus, enough to last these people for some time."

Mamie had started forward as she saw me coming and she was helping me on with my coat.

"Say, Julie, is that your gentleman friend?"

"No, dear, I'll introduce him to you if you like. He's a nice chap, Miss Riley, this is an old friend of mine from home, Jimmie Costello. I guess you know enough about what's not just happened to know that we're not very welcome around here. We're going out to have some dinner now."

Mamie understood immediately. She knew I didn't want Jimmie Costello or anyone else to know that I was friendly in the city of Chicago. She neglected a man who wanted his hat and was asking if he couldn't get a little service while she talked to Jimmie and me.

"Let him take you out to our apartment when you've finished your dinner and I'll come home as soon as I can."
