Menjou and Vidor in "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter."

A sparkling, delicately wrought farcical tale is "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," at the Capitol Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, with scintillating action, superlative acting, smooth direction and magnificent mounting.

This is the Paramount film version of the sensational French stage success by Alfred Savoir, which Pierre Collings adapted and which Malcolm St. Clair has produced with subtlety and sumptuousness.

Adolphe Menjou and Florence Vidor are the central characters in the fun-filled story, which details the exploits of a rich Parisian Beau Brummel, who masquerades as a waiter in order to be near the outwardly haughty, inwardly emotional, Grand Duchess, who has caught his fancy.

The ease and sophistication with which Menjou registers his comedy points stamp him as an actor without a peer in the field of Continental characterization. Miss Vidor, gloriously beautiful in a variety of Paris gowns and the latest French bob, fits the role of the Grand Duchess down to the last dot, and dash and is the personification of feminine charm and regal hauteur.

These two, Menjou and Miss Vidor, hold the centre of the stage throughout the unrelenting of the picture and provoke a continuous succession of laughs and chuckles. The plot, though of light substance, has been so deftly handled by St. Clair that it becomes a matter of considerable interest in itself and keeps the audience wondering what's coming next and how it's all going to end.

"ROSE MARIE" COMING TO GRAND THEATRE

Boston critics are proverbially severe, so it means a great deal when any production receives such unqualified praise as that given "Rose Marie," which, with the entire Boston cast, will be presented by Arthur Hammerstein at the Grand Theatre, Kingston, starting Monday, April 5th, for an engagement of two nights.

For twenty-nine weeks this opera held sway in the Massachusetts capital. Every member of the principals is rated A-1 in the files of Broadway's "Who's Who." They are Virginia Johnson, June Roberts, Paul Donah, Houston Richards, Marguerite McNulty, Arthur J. Geary, Dolores Suarez, Frank Harrington, Paul Porter, William Gaston, Ann Silver and Ruth Schofield. Fully 100 persons form the roster and besides there is an augmented orchestra, which is directed by Herbert Spohr, who wrote "Rose Marie" score in collaboration with Rudolph Friml. As for stage settings and costumes, nothing more striking has been offered to date. Besides the now famous "totem pole" ballet, there is a stunning bridal procession and many other groups that draw applause for the sheer beauty.

Windows---The Eyes of Architecture

By W. L. Symons.

The gospel of sunlight is spreading, and far and wide the marvellous effects of its healing influences—mental and physical—are being taught.

The dim, mouldy, carpeted parlor is being replaced by the sun room and the sanitary hardwood floors, and the question of light and air in our homes is now conceded first place. How can we build to get most sunlight and the best view—and bring all our doors into our rooms—is the question of the day.

The adequate heating of our home is now possible—warm air and hot water superceding the old base burners and self feeders—and we can safely have a few more window openings in our rooms, without dread of cold houses.

Windows have been well termed "the eyes of architecture," not only to look through, but to be seen, and to evidence the character of the inmates.

That our well being is conditioned by the factor of our home environment is beyond question, and our health and disposition will be in direct proportion to the amount of sunlight we admit into our homes; and also in the degree that this healthy environment is beautiful and comfortable it will affect us favorably, or vice-versa.

Without doubt, in house planning, the location and size of the windows must be considered to a great extent from the interior. Each room—even the kitchen—should have, at least, one window through which direct sunlight may come into the room. Plan and replan your house until this is accomplished—and in an old house, watch your sunny walls and cut openings to let in the sunlight.

The plan of each room in your new home should be carefully considered as to the right location of the windows, in order to give proper wall and floor space for the furniture. The living room can be well sunlit from one side, with a four or five light mullioned window, and small openings on each side of the fireplace.

Bedroom windows, two if possible, must be placed so as to give proper light to the dressing table, and so that the bed may be located out of the draught.

If you cannot get direct sunlight—as on a north wall—throw out a deep bay window, to project as far out as possible. Remember the word "bay" originally meant a unit of measurement of sixteen feet. What a caricature of the "bay" our modern planning has made!

Regarding types of windows—we have a choice of two—the lifting balanced sash, and the casement. Both have advantages, but without doubt the latter is the most artistic. If the sash are made to open outward, much better chance is given for hanging of curtains—roller blinds are out of the question—and should be. The window frames may be divided by a transom so as to give a small upper sash, which can be opened without opening the entire height of the window; this will be found to be of great advantage in bed rooms, for night ventilation.

The charm of the casement as far as designing goes, is without doubt, its adaptability to grouping in the rooms, as well as for heights in stair halls, thus allowing great variety in the application and design. As far as the weather is concerned, the casement can be made as serviceable as the lifting sash, by means of metal weather stripping. Care should be given in the selection of suitable hardware, on which depends the entire service of this style of window—as is evidenced by the types used by the metal casement sash manufacturers.

Regarding the exterior of our window openings—the essential thing to remember is, that we have walls in which must be made simple openings—placed rhythmically—and all ornament on or about them is of secondary importance, the important factor being to study the proper disposition, and proportion of the openings, so as to give a facade dignity as well as repose.

Remember, again, that windows must be governed to a large extent by the interior arrangements, and that the outside should never control the inside. Exterior design can be modified to meet interior necessities, and the interior planning can give way somewhat to exterior design.

"Custom dulls observation and sends reason to sleep"—but let us for that reason all the more be strong advocates of the crusade for "more light and air." Copyright, 1926, MacLean Building Reports, Limited.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE CONSERVATIVES

J. F. Sowards Again Chosen President of Kingston Association—Members Present.

The annual meeting of the Kingston Conservative Association was held on Friday night in the Sons of England Hall, there being about a hundred people in attendance. Dr. A. E. Ross, member for Kingston in the Federal House, and Hon. W. F. Nickle, member for Kingston in the Provincial House, were present and made brief addresses. The chair was occupied by President J. F. Sowards.

The reports of the secretary, W. M. Nickle, and the treasurer, A. E. Day, were read, both reports reviewing what had been done since the last meeting two years ago. Mr. Day's report showed that the receipts since the last meeting were $76.88 and the disbursements to $51.24, leaving a balance of $25.64.

Election of officers caused considerable discussion and the motion of T. W. Milo, that the officers be re-elected in a block, was voted down. Mayor Angrove's amendment to have the officers elected individually being carried. Mr. C. Crozier, in some opinion that the officers should be moved on and the offices not "hogged" by anyone. However, the election of officers resulted as follows:

President—Mr. J. F. Sowards.
Vice-President—Mr. T. A. Kidd.
Second Vice-President—Mr. Frank Burke.
Third Vice-President—Mr. Howard Kelly.
Fourth Vice-President—Mr. George Laturnay.
Secretary—Mr. W. M. Nickle.
Treasurer—Mr. A. E. Day.

The ward chairmen and committees were elected as follows:

Rideau Ward—Mr. J. B. Holder.
Mr. A. L. Baker, Mrs. McConnell, Mrs. A. E. Day.
Ontario Ward—Capt. J. Donnelly.
Mr. H. Booth, Mrs. R. N. F. McFarlane, Mrs. I. G. Bogart.
