THE NORTHERN MAP OF TRUTHFUL TALES

and His People extends from Northern Saskatchewan into Northern Ontario. "Wild Goose," Martha Ostensio's famous book, is marked on the map in Northern British Columbia by a picture of a flock of geese in flight; the track of a bear's foot marks the places Ernest Thompson Seton has written of. In connection with the display of the map the books mentioned on it will be placed conveniently for the perusal of patrons. Another map occupies a prominent place in the Children's Library, known as the Map of Fairyland. This picture very vividly the Mother Goose tales, the tales of King Arthur's Court, the Greek myths and the Tuetonic legends. This map is under a large piece of plate glass and is ever the centre of attraction for a number of the children. The tariff reductions on motor cars are a severe blow to Canada's industry, declares A. T. Russell, president of Automotive Industries.

As an instance of how it is worked out, Cape Cod, made famous by the quaint stories of Joseph Lincoln, is marked, "This cape is claimed by Joe Lincoln." The Land of Pierre
