In Connection With Juvenile, Judge Harkness Tells the Rotary Club.

A plea for the more scientific application of the knowledge at hand with regard to the social problems of the day, particularly those problems which affect children, was the note struck by Judge David B. Harkness, M.A., Winnipeg, when he addressed the Rotary Club on Thursday on the subject of "Social Policy and the Child." A number of the members of the Kiwanis Club were present as were also several prominent citizens and Judge Harkness' message was felt by his auditors to be a very timely one.

The speaker emphasized the fact that the opinion of psychologists was that the influences brought to bear on a child during the first few years of its life had more to do with moulding its character than anything in after years. Judge Harkness believed that social workers had much more knowledge regarding matters of this kind at their disposal than was made use of. In this connection he noted that carefully trained experts were employed to develop the material resources of the country while no organized effort of any kind was being made to develop the future citizens.

In the past fifty years, said the speaker, Kingston had made its contribution to the ranks of the leaders and statesmen, but it had also produced its quota of failures, grafters, paupers and thieves. Both of these classes in so far as the future was concerned were now in their cradles, he said, and in another part of his address he declared that if each of these children was treated as an individual case and was given sympathetic help "not one would turn out an absolute failure."

As a step toward better social work, Judge Harkness suggested that in a city such as Kingston a central social council be formed at no expense but it would be a forum where representatives of the various social agencies in the city could meet and discuss their problems with the result that each would know what work the other agencies were undertaking and vastly better results would be obtained.

The speaker who was formerly a judge of one of the largest juvenile courts in Canada, declared himself as opposed to juvenile courts unless an efficient probation service was operated in connection with them. In his opinion the work of the probation officer was more important than that of the judge.

A vote of thanks was moved by Rotarian W. A. Kaiting and seconded by Rotarian Harry Breathwaite. During the meeting Mr. Stewart Drury, a medical student at Queen's University, sang a couple of solos. Rotarian Jack Elder provided a bottle of his new soft drink "Smile" for each person present.

By the prompt action of the brigade the blaze was soon under control and very little damage done. The cause of the fire is supposed to have been from sparks from burning brush in an adjoining yard.

A meeting of the Frontenac Cheese Board was slated to be held on Thursday afternoon, but when the time for the meeting came only Mr. William Pillar, the secretary, being on hand.
