What the Press Agents Say About Coming Attractions

SIR JOHN MARTIN HARVEY IN THE CORSICAN BROTHERS. That modern playgoers can still get a thrill out of romantic drama has been doubted by many students of the theatre but judging from the following review of Sir John Martin Harvey's production of "The Corsican Brothers" it only needs the master touch of a real artist to make the ultra-sophisticated theatregoer of 1926 flock to see it as their fathers did in the oft spoken "good old days."

Sir John takes two roles, those of twin brothers, similar in appearance and in many other things, making each susceptible to the emotions and feelings of the other, whether together or apart. Sir John really gives us a dual portrait of the two brothers, one, Louis del Franchi, sophisticated and a graceful man of the Parisian world, the other, Fabien, lover of sports and devoted to his Corsican mountains and home. His delineation of these two characters was accomplished with a finesse and finish that were remarkable, an easy thing, doubtless, for such a past-master of the histrionic art. But it amazed the onlookers. The change, or perhaps one should say the differentiation, was as marked.

Sir John brings his entire London Company headed by Miss N. de Silva ("Lady Harvey") to the Grand Theatre for one day, Wednesday, April 28th.

LEW CODY GREAT IN "MONTE CARLO." Emerges Triumphantly as an A-1 Comedian in New Production. Lew Cody, long distinguished on the screen as a sophisticated heart-breaker and home wrecker, emerges triumphantly as a first-water comedian in his latest vehicle, "Monte Carlo," at the Capitol Theatre, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

"Monte Carlo" is a frothy comedy, smooth moving and well constructed, with more of a plot than is afforded most comedies, and Cody's distinguished performance as the American scion of wealth, who, estranged from his father, suddenly finds himself receiving the adulation of a prince because he accidentally acquired the prince's clothes, gives his hilarious situation a delicious flavor. Gertrude Olmsted has the leading feminine role in the picture and acquits herself creditably indeed. She is charming and appealing, as the little New England school matron who comes to Monte Carlo after winning a popularity contest in her home town.

Trixie Frigans, famous on the vaudeville stage, where she has been a headliner for many years, has the part of Flossie, the hefty proprietress of the small town garage, who, with Gertrude Olmsted and Zasu Pitts, finds herself precipitated into a trip to Monte Carlo by reason of winning the local newspaper's popularity contest. Cody, Trixie, Zasu and Harvey Myers, as Greves, the faithful valet, carry the major part of the comedy, and the results are side-splitting.

quality and variety that has made The Dumbells famous throughout Canada and the United States for the past seven years.

The English music halls have attached to them staffs of writers and composers who are constantly turning out new material, which has a stronger appeal to the Canadian audiences than to the populations of American cities. The yearly visits of Captain Plunkett to London, enable him to acquire the cream of the English songs and sketches.

That Capt. Plunkett has lost none of his keen insight into the requirements of Canadian audiences and still retains his remarkable ability to pick winners, has been amply demonstrated by the overnight success of his latest revue, "Three Bags Full," which comes to the Grand Opera House for three performances commencing Tuesday evening, May 4th, and including a matinee Wednesday.
