No. 20—Tatters Wanders Into Fairyland.

"Bow, wow, wow! Woof! Woof! Woof! Bow, wow, wow!" went Tatters as he poked his nose around the little secret bush that hid the path to Scrub-Up Land.

The March Hare began to tremble and shiver so hard that he almost dropped his big book with the names in it.

"Dear! Dear! There's a dog. I'll have to hide," he cried breathlessly.

"I'd like to know what he's doing here."

"Bow, wow, wow! Woof! Woof!" went Tatters again. This time a little nearer.

"Quick, Mister Rubadub, can you hide me?" said the poor March Hare.

"Jump into that soap box there," said the fairyman, "until we see what he wants. Now, children, go and open the gate and let him in."

"He sounds like a nice kind dog," said Nick. "I don't believe he'd hurt anyone."

"I should say not," said a tiny voice just then, and there sitting on a sower was Nimble Toes, the Fairy Queen's messenger. "I know this dog and he's a fine fellow, but he has no home. All he wants is to be allowed in to say 'How-do-you-do,'" said Nimble Toes.

The March Hare jumped out of the soap box as quick as a wink at these words, looking a bit ashamed of himself.

"I'm glad to hear it," he exclaimed. "We rabbits must be careful of strange dogs, however. If we do lose our dignity. Open the gate, children."

So Nancy and Nick ran and opened the gate and in walked Tatters.

"Bow, wow! Howdy-do, folks," he said, smiling so he showed all his white teeth. "What place is this?"

Are there any bones buried hereabouts?"

"I'm afraid not, sir," said Mister Rubadub?

But suddenly to the amazement of everybody, there stood a large shiny tin pan right in front of Tatters' nose. And on the pan was a large helping of juicy roast beef, cut up into nice sized pieces for eating. Besides that there was a large marrow bone and some mashed potatoes and gravy. Beside the pan sat a large blue bowl of milk.

A little tinkling laugh came from the place Nimble Toes had been a moment before. But the tiny fairy had disappeared, wand, wings and all!

But now it was no longer a mystery where the delicious dinner had come from.

"Help yourself! Help yourself!" said Mister Rubadub, waving his hand. "Pick right in, sir!"

Tatters did not need to be coaxed, you may be sure.

Nancy and Nick and the March Hare and Mister Rubadub said afterwards that it was better than eating a meal themselves, to see the poor hungry fellow licking up the gravy and potatoes, and swallowing the pieces of meat whole.

"I think I'll save my bone," he said presently. "I know a lovely place to hide it. Um, yum! That was good."

"Would you like a nice bath?" said Mister Rubadub.

"Oh, shouldn't I, though!" cried Tatters. "I'd love it. I won't have to scratch so much then."

"Well, my dears, under all his dirt, Tatters was really a beautiful dog. A good lathering of 'Fairyland Special' soap made his coat like silk.

"I heard Mrs. Greenway say she would like another dog," said Nick.

"Don is getting old, and you look so nice and kind, I think she would take you."

And Mrs. Greenway did take him the minute she saw him and Tatters is there yet. He is very happy.

You see, the fairies are great friends of the dogs, too!

CONFERENCE SUBJECTS

Important Matters for Interprovincial Meeting.

Toronto, April 29.—Interprovincial waterways, taxation and like matters of importance to the provincial administrations will be fully discussed at the interprovincial conference to be held at Ottawa in the week of June 7.

Premier Howard Ferguson announced today. Prior to the conference Premier Ferguson plans a meeting with Premier Taschereau, of Quebec, in connection with matters of peculiar interest to Ontario and Quebec.

One of the most important questions to be taken up is the problem of succession duties, which has been before the Ontario Government for years. The Ontario Government has long held the opinion that the duplicate system of taxation now existing is a hardship in many cases.
