The Editor Hears

That the tourist travel through Canada is beginning and although we all hope the strikes in England will be soon settled, there is no doubt that until things are more quiet over there people who were thinking of crossing the Atlantic for pleasure will hesitate to do so, and that, therefore, the tourist travel on this side of the water will be increased. We would have more tourists in this part of the country if more people would open up their homes for travellers. Anyone who has motored through the mountain roads of the Eastern States will know of hundreds of comfortable stopping places for motorists. The automobile blue book that has its place in every car, has a list of them and their attractive appearance makes one want to stop and sample almost everyone of them. A green lawn, tall trees, shaded verandahs and windows open to let in the breeze from the mountains, the meadows or the sea, pretty, simple furnished diningrooms, with small tables just big enough to accommodate a motor party, comfortable beds and plenty of hot water to wash away the stains of travel are the only attractions of the road houses that make motoring such a delight. The food served is good but plain, hungry motorists do not care for frills but want something hot and substantial. Why cannot the people living along our provincial highway make some extra money in the same way as their cousins to the south? It would be good for them, good for the tourists and good for the country.

That Harry Lauder is once more playing farewell engagements in Europe, and says he will spend the remainder of his days fishing in Scotland.

That several Kingstonians who sailed for England before the strike will receive the news on shipboard with uneasiness and will find matters in England very different from their expectations.

That only the medical students are left at Queen's. Soon they too will go off to the hospitals or to practices and then until July quiet will reign. As soon as the schools close, however, we will have the summer school with us. This makes a good deal of difference to the Kingston merchants, for during six weeks Kingston has from five to six hundred men and women of good incomes who will spend their money in the city.

St. George's Reception To Rector and His Family

Heartily indeed was the welcome extended by the congregation of St. George's cathedral on Wednesday evening to the Very Rev. W. W. Craig, Mrs. Craig and their family. St. George's hall was filled with the members of the parish, their friends and the Anglican clergy of the city and neighborhood and their wives. The platform was decorated with ferns and flowers at this end of the hall were the new rector and his wife, to whom their parishioners were introduced by Rev. W. E. Kidd, Bishop Bidwell, Mrs. W. E. Kidd and Mrs. E. J. B. Pense received also, and Miss Craig was present to meet the St. George's girls. A musical programme was arranged by Mr. R. R. F. Harvey, the cathedral organist, with songs by Miss Anna and Miss Florence Mitchell, Mr. C. B. S. Harvey and Mr. Eytan Warburton.

Dr. P. G. C. Campbell asked the church wardens to come to the platform, and Mr. Percy D. Lyman, the people's warden, expressed on behalf of the congregation their welcome to Dr. and Mrs. Craig. He had been at school in Montreal with the dean and little had either of them thought that they would meet again in their present relationship. Mr. R. J. Carson, the rector's warden, also added a word of welcome. The bishop spoke in his delightful way of the dean and rector of St. George's and referred to the happy relations he himself had had with the congregation as their dean and rector for four years and as the bishop of the diocese since his consecration. He assured Dr. Craig he would find much response and co-operation. He also spoke of his knowledge of the dean and of his outstanding position among the Anglican clergy of Canada.

Archdeacon Dobbs welcomed Dean and Mrs. Craig on behalf of the diocese and, referring to the dean's first sermons preached in the Cathedral on Sunday, said he carried his sermon on "The Friendship of Christ" further and felt it also meant his desire for friendship with the congregation and that the evening sermon on mutual ministry spoke of the desire for the co-operation of his parishioners.

Dean Craig gave a short address saying he and his family hoped to be very happy in Kingston. On his appointment to the deanery he had received letters from ten bishops, among them the Bishop of Montreal, Bishop Farthing a former rector of the cathedral parish, and all of them had congratulated him and had spoken of the beauty of the cathedral and the great opportunities the appointment offered for usefulness. He spoke of his pleasure at finding one of the church wardens was a boyhood friend, and of his hospitality to him since his arrival in Kingston. He also spoke warmly of Rev. W. E. Kidd, and said he was sure they would work well together. Dean Craig said one of his regrets was that the bishop was leaving Kingston so soon after he had come to the cathedral. He had known of him for years and had always admired and esteemed him.

The reception was arranged by the cathedral societies, both of men and women, and coffee was poured at a table centred with a tall silver candelabra holding yellow sandalwood and further adorned with spring blossoms in silver baskets, by Miss Muckleston and Mrs. J. H. Elmsley. The tea table decked with golden marigolds was presided over by Mrs. R. Easton Burns and the assistants were the young girls and men of the various societies.
