PROMPT DELIVERY

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS
by Olive Roberts Bartor

Mister Tingaling Can't Make Change.

Mister Tingaling got the rent money from Mister Bunny, then thanking Mrs. Bunny for their lovely lunch and the good time they had, the fairyman and the Twins took their departure.

The first thing they did was to take poor Biddy Hen to the house in the log behind the bushes—the very one that the bad little goblin had tried to rent to her.

"It's just lovely!" clucked Mrs. Hen. "The very place I'm looking for to hatch out a family. How much is it?"

"Ten cents a month in fairy money," said Mister Tingaling. "I'll be around in thirty days to collect." They left Mrs. Hen scratching around in the soft rotten wood of her new house, to make a nice cosy nest.

Then they went on their travels. "We'll go to Maple Tree Flats next," said Mister Tingaling. "The Cracknuts are always ready with their rent, so we'll go there first."

Munch Mouse, the janitor, took them up on the elevator inside of the Maple Tree. When they stepped off at the floor where the Cracknuts family lived, there stood Daddy Cracknuts himself in his doorway, looking as kind and friendly as an old gray squirrel gentleman can look.

"Why hello there, Tingaling!" he said, shaking hands with the fairyman. "I see you are in good company. Hello, Nancy and Nick! Helping out as usual, I see. Come right in, all of you. I guess I know what you're after, as it is the thirty-second day of the month."

"You guessed right, Daddy Cracknuts," said Mister Tingaling. "It's rent day. And my big pocketbook is still as empty as a balloon, almost."

Twenty-five cents in fairy money is all I have."

"Well, you'll have mine pretty soon, Mister Landlord. I have it all ready for you." And digging down into his pocket, Daddy Cracknuts pulled out a brand new bill, which he slowly unfolded and laid on the table.

Mister Tingaling's eyes nearly popped out of his head. "Ten dollars," he gasped. "I—I'm afraid I can't change it."

"That's too bad," said Daddy, folding it up again and putting it into his pocket. "Just wait and I'll see if Ma has the amount. Ma! Oh, Ma! Here's the landlord. Have you any money?"

"The landlord!" called Mrs. Cracknuts. "I'll be right in. I want to see him about some new wall paper for the dining room."

And in she bustled. "Wall-paper!" said Mister Tingaling in a worried voice. "Is it so very bad? Are you sure your walls need papering, Mrs. Cracknuts?"

"Yes, they're all brown," said the squirrel lady. "The walls are maple wood, you know, and the syrup has soaked through in spots and made them all brown."

"Why, I should charge you extra for having maple syrup free!" exclaimed Mister Tingaling. "I—I really don't think I can put new wall-paper on any of your rooms this year, Mrs. Cracknuts. Money's so expensive just now and I haven't much. Besides I need a new hat and a pair of shoes. I mean the price of food is up so."

"Why, Mister Tingaling! Making us do without wall paper just to make a duke of yourself! I'm surprised," said the lady. "Let me see. You want your rent money, don't you? Well, I have a dollar bill about some place. I suppose I'll have to go and get it. Excuse me for a minute, please."

Mrs. C. F. Yates was at Hard Island for Mother's Day in the school-house there, and added her quota to the service. This is a rural Sunday school that is doing a real community work, and being so near Athens, many a resident drops in for the afternoon, and finds it such a "homey" sort of school, that there is ever the desire to repeat the visit. Decorations appropriate for the various occasions throughout the year, although they mean time and labor for those interested, transform the school-room into a bower of loveliness, and will leave an impression upon the mind of the young in particular, which will endure for many years to come.

Mrs. Gore, Sarah street, has been spending the past three weeks or so attending Mrs. John Fortune, Addison road, who is very ill. Farmers, in the vicinity, are taking advantage of the fine days, to get their belated "spring's work" under way.
