The Editor Hears

That Kingstonsians living in the central residential part of the city were startled to hear one evening recently the strange call of the bird called the whip-poor-will. In the still summer dusk of the woodland, these birds repeat their wierd cry again and again during their nesting season, but rarely are they heard in cities. The whip-poor-will is seldom seen, for he likes the dark and the thick woods for his home. Sometimes these birds are seen dusting in the country roads when the lights of a car startles them and they fly to the woods. They have a peculiar habit of perching lengthwise on a branch close to the wood so that they will not be seen. The plumage is mottled and streaked with black and brown, with white throat. The whip-poor-will builds no nest, but lays its eggs on leaves in the silent places in the thick woods, trusting to its own colors, so like the leaves, for concealment.

That the friends of the crows should see some of the poor baby chicks that have their eyes picked out by the crows, who consider them choice morsels. Their humane owners destroy the blinded chickens that are pathetic objects. The eyes of chickens of Kingstonsians have been recently picked out by crows.

That motorists driving on the Ottawa highway pass signs directing that dogs be muzzled for fear of rabies. Prevention is better than cure.

That one of our readers wants to have the verses written by Dr. Sampson, one of Kingston's earlier medical men who lived in a long, low, white house that used to stand on the corner of William and King street, where a fine row of brick houses stands to-day, on the occasion of Mr. John Cartwright, who built "Rockwood House," adding a large stable to the buildings. The verses, found in Miss Machar's "Story of Old Kingston," are:

"Would to God that I were able To build a house like Cartwright's stable; For it doth fill me with remorse To be worse housed than Cartwright's horse."

The Mr. Cartwright referred to was the father of Mrs. Van Straubene, Beverly street, Kingston.

AUNT HET

"None of our family was liquor-heads except Cousin Jim. He took a spoonful before meals 'all one winter."

FRIEND O' MINE.

When you are happy, friend o' mine, And all your skies are blue, Tell me your luck, your fortune fine, And let me laugh with you. Tell me the hopes that spur you on, The deeds you mean to do, The gold you've struck, the fame you've won, And let me joy—with you!

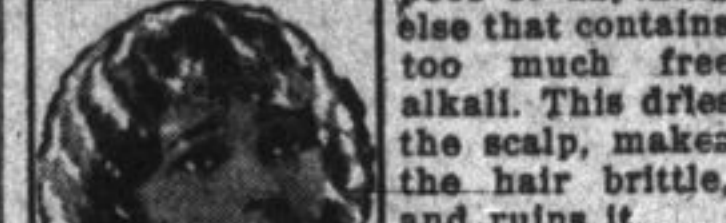

When you are sad and heart a-cold, And all your skies are dark, Tell me the dreams that mocked your hold, The shafts that missed the mark, Am I not your for weal or woe? How else can friends prove true? Tell me what breaks and brings you low, And let me stand—with you!

So, when the night falls tremulous, When the last lamp burns low, And one of us or both of us The long, lone road must go, Look with your dear old eyes in mine, Give a handshake true; Whatever fate our souls await, Let me be there—with you!

Bracelets more resembling cuffs, heavily jeweled, and costing in some cases as much as $10,000, are worn in London.

Alkali in Shampoos Bad For the Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Do not use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulisified is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulisified coconut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulisified. Beware of imitations. Look for the name Watkins on the package.
