AN ATTACK ON THE KING GOVERNMENT

not stand shoulder to shoulder on every question but they at least stood firmly behind the policy of Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen as they believed it to be in the best interests of the country as a whole.
"Last October there was an election," said Dr. Manion, "and Mr. King on his own word went to the country because the majority he had in the House was not sufficient to enable him to carry out his plans. His government got 200,000 less votes than the Conservative party and we defeated him and all his ministers in Ontario. But this was not enough for Mr. King. By a process of barter and sale with the Progressives he has succeeded in hanging on to office against the wishes of the people and may go on for some time yet."

The speaker continued to say that Mr. Kennedy, the Progressive member for Pease River had been adjudged not elected by a court judge but the House of Commons had witnessed the spectacle of Hon. George Bovin, Minister of Customs, who had been shown by the present customs probe to have interfered with the anti-smuggling laws and the anti-bootlegging laws, defending Mr. Kennedy. "This is the kind of barter and sale that keeps Mr. King in power," declared Dr. Manion.

Betrayed Alberta.

Referring to the want of confidence vote which was taken early in the morning on the day of the picnic, the Fort William member said that the Alberta members who had voted against the motion had betrayed their province. At the same time Lucien Cannon and Bouffard had been raising the race and creed cry. But with all these things the Government only scraped through with a majority of six.

"Through all the record of the King Government we find mis-government, broken pledges and extravagance," said Dr. Manion. "I have, on another occasion, compared Mr. King to Dickens's character Mr. Micawber, who when pressed for payment of a debt gave a promissory note which he had no intention of paying and said 'Well thank God that debt is paid!' Mr. King makes promises and breaks them and when pressed on the matter makes a new promise."

Broken Pledges.

"I will give a few instances of these broken pledges: When the speech from the Throne was brought in it contained a clause to the effect that there should be no change in the tariff until the whole matter had been investigated by a Tariff Commission. It was broken. Eight days after the appointment of the Commission it was found when the Government cut the duty on automobiles."

With regard to the cut in tariff on autos, Dr. Manion said that Mr. Foster had remarked that only two per cent. of the people in Canada would buy new automobiles this year and therefore only two per cent. of the people would benefit from the cut while the other 98 per cent. would pay for it.

Dr. Manion then chaffed Mr. Mackenzie King with duplicity and deceit in this matter because after cutting the duty from 35 to 20 per cent. and after announcing that they would stick to their guns on the matter, the Government had put the protection back to 29 per cent. This had been done by giving rebates for three per cent. and removing a six per cent. luxury tax from Canadian and not from American automobiles. If this was not protection, Dr. Manion said that he didn't know what else it was.

Owing to what he termed the un-stability of the tariff, no man would think of investing money in Canada to-day, said the speaker. That was what was driving the sons and daughters of Canadians to the United States; the most highly protectionist country in the world. Covering a certain period 422,000 immigrants had been brought into Canada but during the same period 500,000 Canadians had gone to the United States.

"The history of the King Government on the tariff is something for that Government to forget and for everyone else to remember," declared the speaker. "Their policy has been retreat, retreat, side-step and dodge. It is an improved political fox-trot; a few steps forward, a few steps backward, a sideways glide and then turn round."

Progress Under Protection.

The speaker contended that any country which had made any commercial progress had made it under a protective tariff. England was now supposed to be a free trade country yet its duty on automobiles was higher than that of Canada. England had not adopted free trade until her manufactures were developed to such a degree that she could undersell all competitors. Even before the war however England had begun to feel the effects of this free trade policy.

The case of the Libby-Owens glass factory at Hamilton was cited by Dr. Manion as an example of how the present tariff system in Canada worked adversely to Canadian industry. This factory had capital to the extent of $2,000,000 invested; it employed 500 people; and the price of product compared favorably with the prices at which imported glass could be bought. Then the Belgians had recovered from the war and began making glass and shipping it into Canada at prices the Canadian factory couldn't meet. The Libby-Owens people had gone to Mr. King and asked him to put a dumping duty on this glass but had been refused. In time the Canadian factory was closed down and the price of Belgian glass immediately went up higher than Libby-Owens had been asking. In this case the capitalist didn't gain because his money was lost; the workmen didn't gain because his job was gone; and the Canadian people didn't gain for they paid more for their glass. The only one to gain was the Belgians, said the speaker. He wanted to know if the idea of the King Government was to build up foreign countries. Mr. King was the greatest immigration agent the United States had, he declared.

In closing, the speaker said that what was needed was the Old National Policy which gave adequate protection to everyone. No people needed protection more than the farmers of Ontario and Quebec. The speaker admitted that protection could not benefit the grain growers of the West very much but he said that there were only about 2,000,000 people out there. Canada needed a policy to protect it against the low labor laws and low wages of foreign countries.

Mr. M. J. O'Brien.

Mr. M. J. O'Brien, of Ottawa, was called on to introduce the next speaker, Hon. J. W. Edwards. Mr. O'Brien roundly condemned the King Government and stated that they would hold on to office as long as they could but he hoped that would not be long. The speaker warmly praised Hon. Dr. Edwards and said that he was a man of power to the cause of Conservatism. He had been a member of the Cabinet in Hon. Arthur Meighen's Government and he hoped to see him again as a Cabinet Minister before long.

Adjust Our Tariff.

Hon. J. W. Edwards spoke quite briefly declaring that the words that he had written as a message to the people could very well stand as his address. His message was, "I believe in adjusting our tariff so as to guarantee as far as possible that Canadian farm, dairy and garden products will be used on Canadian tables and not the cheap surplus of foreign countries."

Dr. Edwards took occasion to thank the electors of Frontenac-Adirondack for having elected him to Parliament in the last election. He also thanked Mr. I. Cohen for having erected the platform for the picnic and H. C. Nickle, superintendent of the Street Railway for throwing open the Park on this occasion.

Dr. Edwards read a letter from Hon. Dr. Ross, who regretted being unable to be present. He was sorry that Hon. J. S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture, could not attend, and expressed satisfaction at having Hon. Dr. Manion present. Dr. Edwards made a comparison of the Canadian rates of duty with the Australian rates of duty, particularly in butter and eggs and pointed out that the Canadian rate was 10 a lb. and the Australian rate 5c a lb. He stated that he could not understand why such a condition should exist. He stated that under the King Government it was required to have eggs in one of six different grades and under the tariff policy of the King Government, which lowered the tariff wall and allowed goods of other countries to pour in, the Canadian farmer would never be allowed to get the best price for his stuff. He declared that the policy of the King Government was the direct opposite to that of the United States and contended that Canada was suffering from it.

Dr. Edwards was the last speaker of the day and at the conclusion of his address, the meeting came to a close with the singing of the National Anthem.

The Sports.

The sports programme consisted of a softball game between a girls' team from Enterprise and one from Westbrook, which was won by the
