SPORTING NOTES AND COMMENT

The Kingston seniors will engage in two Central Ontario League games this week. On Wednesday they will play at Belleville against the Belleville Nationals and on Friday evening they will be at home to the Peterboro team. Wednesday's game in Belleville should be a real scorching affair and it would not be surprising to see a rather large delegation leave the city on Wednesday afternoon to see this tussle. That Friday's game will be a hard-fought affair goes without saying. The Petes are fighting with their backs to the wall now and will put everything they have into Friday's game to come through with a win.

Walter McMullen, sports editor of The Hamilton Spectator, has the following to say with regard to the O.H.A. and its conscientious action in declining to allow aggregations of all-stars to compete in its champion-

"Life appears to be one disappointment after another with Western Ontario fans. They had barely recovered from the jolt handed them by the O.B.A.A. when along comes the O.H.A. with an announcement regarding touring players that proved even more disheartening than the baseball rulings. Nearly all of the clubs in the Bix Six group are affected, and the ruling means that many men who were dreaming of championships coming their way next winter have been wakened by a sad jolt. The O.H.A. announced several times that tourists would not be granted certificates, so that the players and clubs affected cannot say that they were not warned. If the association had not taken the action it did, its prestige would have been lost, and no amateur organization has tried harder to keep sport clean. Its rules are the most drastic of any amateur body on the continent, but even then the clubs and players find ways and means of evading them."

Have a look at the Windsor team of "amateurs" which it was proposed to use in the O.H.A. senior series, and then stop wondering why the big league said "No!" Here are the Windsor players turned down by the O.H.A. executive: Roland Huard, Fort William, left wing, who was one of the stars in the hectic series with Port Arthur; Arthur Clark of Grimsby, regular left wing with the team that won the intermediate championship two years ago; Wilfred Cecil, a speedy Frenchman from Pembroke, and a centre player of high merit; Ludger Demerais, a Sudbury right wing; Clarence Thompson, a high wing from New Liskeard; Michael Brophy of the Owen Sound Greys; Andy Bellemer of New Hamburg, and Jack Barrett of London .- Toronto Globe.

The United States Lawn Tennis Association is deeply interested in an educational movement for the purpose of disseminating knowledge of its favorite game, and how to play it. Two seasons ago this campaign of education was started by making a series of five reels of movingpicture films showing the champion players making their favorite strokes. Earlier in the season New York Tilden, Johnston, Richards, Williams, Patterson, Brookes, Wood, Alonzo and Miss Helen Wills were all filmed before slow-motion cameras, and the reels leaned to clubs throughout the country to show the younger players how the experts made their strokes. Now a systematic method Getting away from Philadelphia, has been found to present these wonderful pictures in book form so that New York started on another win- they can be studied at leisure, and over 300 enlargements from these ning streak that reached 16 straight, action films are to appear in the new "Lawn Tennis Library." ping the final contest.

In order to keep the face of the putter at right angles, the positions of the hands on the shaft must be changed. Move the left hand a trifle to the left and the right hand toward the right. You may find that this must be continued until the hands are on oppositee sides of the shaft. The only possible method is to test this out until the right positions are found.

It may be that the best position will be with the left hand well down on the left side of the shaft and the right hand comparatively near the

The chances are that this will be a two-handed grip, both hands and wrists doing an equal share of the work. This could be changed somewhat by extending the right forefine hitting of Ray Bressler. The big Phillies have dropped back into the ger down the shaft.
