NO TRACE YET FOUND OF MISSING CONVICT

Lawrence Hurlbut Has Had Liberty From "Pen" Since May 31st.

Lawrence Hurlbut, the Portsmouth penitentiary prisoner who made his escape from the Hotel Dieu Hospital on May 31st, is still at large, and so far the local authorities have not received the slightest clue as to his whereabouts.

This man was sentenced at Toronto last August, to serve seven years in the penitentiary, but a short time after being brought to the prison it was found that he was suffering from severe symptoms of heart disease. He grew rapidly worse until in December, on the advice of three city physicians, he was removed to the Hotel Dieu for treatment.

LETTERS To The Editor Of The Whig

Roy O. Dulmage Gives His Version of Accident

Sir.—Having read the accounts of the regrettable automobile accident in which I was connected recently, in several newspapers, I have noticed that on some points scarcely two reports agree, or else the wrong one is given altogether.

I have noticed that most papers say that the driver thought that he was on the road leading to the Belleville bay bridge, or else the bay bridge itself, when the accident occurred. On the contrary both the driver and myself knew we were not on the bay bridge road but we thought that, after making the left turn from the Kingston highway, we could then turn to our right, and follow a street running west until we reached one of the streets leading to the bay bridge.

However, after making the left turn we followed this street south, looking for a turn to our right as I said before. We were going slowly for it was raining heavily and very dark. The only point at which anything could be clearly seen was the arc through which the automatic windshield wiper was working in front of the driver. Nothing was said for some little time previous to the accident except when the lights of the boat at the wharf showed up. Then Keith Ostrander said "This must be a railroad switch."

The colored lights on the boat and the railway tracks on the dock served to strengthen this opinion. The next instant I noticed the blackness four or five feet ahead of the car, and then came the crash as the car went over. The car instantly filled with water, and sank to the bottom of the bay. Some newspapers said that I was jolted when the car went over, but this was not the case. I went to the bottom with the car and after the first shock had passed, I thought of the car door and that I must hold my breath. I miraculously found the handle of the door and the buoyancy of the water shot me to the surface just as I would have been forced to take a deep breath. I would have gladly helped any of the rest to safety had it been in my power but it was utterly impossible under the circumstances.

I then swam towards the wharf calling for help three times. I tried to grasp something at the dock but the front of it was perfectly smooth. I was then totally exhausted and was slowly sinking, this being hastened by the fact that I had on a raincoat which was by this time water soaked. Just as I was going under I felt a rope and grasped it, but I was too weak to be pulled to the dock. The next thing I knew I felt a ladder and was finally hauled to the dock by its aid. I was then taken beside the boiler of the steamer Glen Allen, and later taken to the Belleville hospital in the police car.

I would state here that the driver of the car, Keith Ostrander, used every possible precaution to prevent an accident. He was driving very slowly and watching as much as possible. The night was an extremely bad one and there was nothing to warn him of his danger. Not one of the four occupants of the car ever dreamed that they were dangerously near the waters of the Bay of Quinte when the accident occurred.

The papers stated that I was a cousin of Geraldine Dulmage, and I would like to state here that Keith and Berencie Ostrander were my first cousins also.

I would like to take this opportunity of thanking anyone who helped in any way to save me from certain death, the Belleville police force, for their courteous treatment of me at the time and after the accident and also the staff of the Belleville General Hospital for their many acts of kindness.

Thanking you for your valuable space, ROY O. DULMAGE. Picton, June 21.

Young Man Mourning The Loss of $600

A young man, whose home is in Watertown, N. Y., was robbed of $600, just a short time ago, so he claimed, by a number of gypsies who visited Watertown, N. Y. He believes that the band of gypsies who were arrested for the bank robbery at Seely's Bay may be the parties who stole his money, and for this reason he has made a trip to Canada to try and have his case investigated.

Changes at Renslow Schools. Miss Higginson, mathematical specialist in Renslow collegiate institute and a very capable teacher, has tendered her resignation. Her health has caused her to resign, following a long leave of absence. Miss Hutchison, head of the home-making department, is also to leave. An advertisement is also run for a new principal of Renslow public school, W. T. Baker being dissatisfied with the salary offered him at the last meeting of the Board, a change of stipend having resulted through the abolition of the Model school. Presentation to Miss Kells. On Monday evening at the close of the meeting of the Willing Workers Society of Zion church, Carleton Place, a pleasant event took place when Miss Edith Kells, treasurer of the society, was presented with a beautiful silver fern bowl and cake plate. Miss A. McCrostie read the address, and Miss Edith Cram made the presentation. The bride elect thanked the society for their beautiful gifts.
