The Editor Hears

That the triennial meeting of the Canadian Women's Press Club held in Toronto was an unqualified success. The Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways carried the delegates who came from the Atlantic and the Pacific coasts to the meeting and back to their homes again, and their officials were unfailing in courtesies to the women writers of the Dominion. Luncheon at the King Edward Hotel were given by both railway companies to their guests, and after the delightful evening at Hart House on Thursday each member of the club was presented with a big box of sweets (made in Canada) by the C.P.R. whose chief, the late George Ham was affectionately known by every member as "The father of the Women's Press Club," and whose genial presence was so much missed at the meeting this year. The Toronto Women's Press Club made splendid hostesses, and the City of Toronto gave a most delightful outing to the Dominion members on Thursday when they were taken over to the island and entertained at luncheon at the Royal Canadian Yacht Club. The Grange was opened to the visitors and the pictures in Toronto's gallery and the singing and dancing of the Ukrainians, who wore their native dress, were greatly admired. On Friday the Canadian Steamship Company took the Club to Niagara Falls and the Queen Victoria Parks Commission gave the members of the party dinner at the Refectory where the illumination of the falls was witnessed before the visitors returned to Toronto. As well as at these public entertainments, the members of the club were entertained at tea at Government House by Mrs. Cockshutt and by Lady Willison, a former president of the Toronto Club, at her charming home at Elmley Place.

That in spite of the lack of warmth there is a wonderful beauty about the country just now. The trees are in full leaf, the wild roses are blooming by the roadside, buttercups and daisies show white and gold among the grass, the osier dogwood blooms in the swamps and the first clover scents the air and entices the bees with its fragrance. To have time and a car in which to follow the open road to all these delights is the happy state of many of our citizens. Let all those who can enjoy the beauty of early summer do so.

That one of the lessons which those who have but recently entered into power and place must learn is that courtesy to all those with whom they come in contact is the marks of the gentleman and gentlewoman. There is an old, old motto used by those who trace their ancestry to the days of the crusaders. It is "poblesse oblige" and means that the knight of noble lineage felt the obligation upon him to be courteous to rich and poor alike. Kindly people have no need to learn this lesson: they are nature's noblemen, but those of a less kindly disposition should endeavor to cultivate it if they wish to be considered "to the manner born."

Paris—Even a well known flyer like Miss Adrienne Bolland, whose capability is guaranteed by her flight across the Cordilleras, finds it impossible to get regular work as a pilot. She has therefore opened a bar at Montmarie, under the name "The White Mule," which she is prepared to desert from time to time whenever an air stunt comes her way.

London—A demonstration of women for equal rights with men is set for July 3rd. Twenty women's organizations have agreed to take part. Votes for women at the age of twenty-one and equal franchise qualifications at all ages will be the demands. Supporters of the movement are Emmeline Pankhurst, Lady Rhonda, Ellen Wilkinson, M.P., Mrs. Flora Drummond, and Lady Astor, M.P.

London—English women aviators have won their fight to be placed on an equal footing with men flyers in regard to license. Hereafter, women pilots may qualify for licenses permitting the carrying of passengers for profit, ending a twelve month campaign led by Mrs. Sophia Elliott Lynn, first to receive an amateur's license.

Deauville—Winifred Hudnut, divorced wife of Rudolph Valentino, will divide her time between making movies and dancing at the Deauville Casino this summer. Miss Hudnut and her mother have a home on the Riviera where the former will rest before the season begins.

Paris—Women of France are drinking liquors more than formerly. M. Marcel Labbe told the Academy of Medicine. The increase was described as not being limited to any particular class of women, but pointed out that it has accompanied the increase in women's participation in work previously limited to men. One newspaper called it "the spirit of the times" to see "women imitating man even in his lower tastes."

Pittsburgh—Believing that he can solve many police problems by employing women as detectives, Pittsburgh's director of public safety, James Clark, has asked the city council to add fifteen women to his force. The women's auxiliary would devote its time to social evil questions, watch the conduct of girls in cabarets and dance halls, and keep an eye on girl arrivals at railroad depots.

Paris—A woman inspector studied how a hundred French work women took advantage of their "English week," which means not working on Saturday afternoon, a recent importation from England, and found that ninety-six spent the afternoon in work and four in amusement. Most of them did their Saturday shopping on the way home. There they occupied themselves with their washing, if they lived alone, or helped their mothers if they lived in family.

NOVEL PURSE

Raised cherries appliqued on a blue calf envelope purse make a new novelty decoration.

Knew Better. "What are you doing here?" "Fishing." "Can't you see that notice, 'No fishin' here?'" "No fish in here? Don't tell me that, I've caught a dozen already." —Karlaturen, Oslo.

Making Friends Quickly. "When I want to borrow a quid I never go to a friend," he said, as if leading up to something. "Ah, well," returned the other, extending his hand, "let us be friends."

A Question. "Well, the days are getting longer." "When did you get married?" —Tit-Bits, London.

Notes About Women

Berlin—Elizabeth Bergner, popular stage and screen star who has refused several American contracts, has a stuffed teddybear complex. A reporter found her in her dressing room toying with more than twenty of the dummy beasts in all sizes and colors.

London—"British, therefore best" is not a popular slogan with British manufacturers of women's hats. Many of the "Paris" hats sold in England are actually made at Luton, near here. The British Chambers of Commerce is fathering a bill in Parliament intended to identify all British-made goods in such a manner that the foreign origin of goods sold in England cannot be concealed. The British manufacturers of women's hats are on the rampage. It would prevent them from representing their own wares as Paris-made.

London—"Reasonably" short skirts and exposed necks and throats have an advocate in Sir Thomas Oliver, president of the London Institute of Hygiene. "When it first became the craze for the greater part of the neck to be exposed, mothers frequently consulted me before giving their daughters permission to abandon high-necked gowns," said Sir Thomas. "As first I doubted whether it was wise for delicate girls who had repeatedly been treated for winter cough, to try such an experiment. But I soon found that the new fashion banished the winter cough and improved the general health of delicate girls."

Sir Thomas also believes that the growth of women's hair has been improved by cutting, and shorter skirts have greatly improved health.

Havana—Women automobile drivers are so rare in Havana and the cities close to the capital that a minor accident in which a woman driver is implicated deserves a front page headline in Havana newspapers with a column of details. There are less than a hundred registered women drivers in Havana, with only one, Senorita Gonzalez, having a "chauffeur-mechanic" license, entitling her to drive all classes of motor driven vehicles.

Paris—Even a well known flyer like Miss Adrienne Bolland, whose capability is guaranteed by her flight across the Cordilleras, finds it impossible to get regular work as a pilot. She has therefore opened a bar at Montmarie, under the name "The White Mule," which she is prepared to desert from time to time whenever an air stunt comes her way.

Most of them did their Saturday shopping on the way home. There they occupied themselves with their washing, if they lived alone, or helped their mothers if they lived in family.

Others earned a little extra money by working for their neighbors. Another report on women's work in Paris by an inspectress of the Ministry of Labor said that there has been an enormous improvement in conditions since the war.

Bath—Madame Sarah Grand, the novelist, has turned matchmaker. As Mayor of Bath many strange tasks have fallen to her lot. A lonely farmer in Queensland, Australia, the owner of 20,000 acres of land, was provided with a wife after Madame Grand interviewed more than one hundred applicants.

Constantinople—The new Turkey is witnessing the fall of another old barrier between men and women. The partitions enclosing the women's quarters, which have existed on all boats plying between the Asiatic and European shores, are to be knocked down. Men and women passengers will sit side by side henceforth.

London—The latest housewarming in which the King and Queen participated was the occasion of Princess Victoria taking up her abode at "Coppins," Iwer, Buckinghamshire, when the Princess became her own householder for the first time. The house which the Princess, who is the King's sister, has taken is quite small and has nothing about it to suggest royal ownership.
