QUEEN MARY'S HEADGEAR

Interest in horses and riders ran second at the recent English races to the interest in Queen's Mary's millinery. Apparently there is a decided change of policy. She has dropped her compact toque and her small, but heavily-laden cloche in favor of the large picture hat which allows a great expanse for the display of plumes, aigrettes, ribbons, rosettes and the fauna and flora which the beloved First Lady of England affects. Instead of the misty blue gray, color of London's well-known fogs, which is her majesty's favorite color, she has been choosing mauve, the deeper purples and pure white with wide ostrich boas to match. Photographed above are some of the Queen's hats in which she exercised the divine right of a queen to be impervious to style. Since her snowy hair, worn high in regal fashion, is one of her greatest claims to beauty, she is never so pleasing as when she is unhatred, or wears coronet of jewels.

Kathleen Jenkins, Toronto, and includes in its itinerary every place of beauty and interest in the west.

Very pleasant in spite of the storm clouds, was the Saturday tea at the Kingston Tennis Club. Mrs. Cecil E. Wright and Mrs. Ambrose Shea presided at the tea table and were assisted by Mrs. W. H. Rev. W. E. Kidd and Mrs. Kidd, who have been at Fern Bank, Brockville, for several weeks, will return to Kingston shortly and will spend the remainder of the month of July in town. Their friends are preparing many entertainments in their honor, for it was with the deepest regret that the people of St. George's Cathedral learned that they were to lose two kindly, sympathetic friends to whom the traditions of the cathedral were as dear as to the oldest member.

That we hear the Girl Guides are studying the birds and all the wild things at their camp at Eagle Lake near Tichborne. This is a good idea. How much more pleasure we would all get out of life if we knew more of the wild life around us. This is the season for city folk to study the birds and beasts, to learn the names of plants, trees and flowers. Take a book along with you when you go to camp to tell you the names of the flowers and another with good plates to tell you about the birds. The geographical department at Ottawa will give you a good bird book for a small cost, and if you ask about a guide to the plant life of Canada the officials will be sure to help you. Already some boys and girls have learned nature study in school and, if taken up as a pastime, it will add much to the delights of a holiday in the country.

That the fact that an admission fee is not taken at a dance held on Sunday may make it legal but will it make it right? We think many of our readers will answer "No." Six days should hold enough dancing for the most ardent worshipper of the muse Terpsichore.

That the North of Ireland carrier who takes the mail to the station had again decorated his horse (which is as enthusiastic an Orangeman as he is himself), with orange ribbons in honor of the "Glorious Twelfth." This is an annual event and the people at the station look for the appearance of the man and horse with the gay decorations.

In older days, when travelling from Newcastle-on-Tyne to Carlisle, a judge of Assize had to be accompanied by the sheriff with a retinue of 200 men to protect him from being captured for ransom by bands of Scotsmen.

Dummies that move their heads, hips and eyes by means of electric motors have been devised by Paris tailors.

AUNT HET

"I could bandage my ankles and make 'em smaller, but I'd feel kind o' foolish doin' it unless I was a widow."

The Editor Hears

That the summer school students of Queen's University are with us once more in greater strength than ever and were much in evidence in the churches on Sunday. Sydenham street church, where the united congregations of Chalmers and Sydenham are worshipping during the month of July, had a great number of the students who are members of the United Church. St. Andrew's welcomed the Presbyterians and most of the Anglicans go to St. George's Cathedral where they find the beautiful choral service of which they have so often spoken in years past. We are all glad to have the students who are in Kingston for work and for the pleasure a change of air and scenery combined with a forward step taken in their career gives.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE Portland. The June meeting of the Women's Institute was held in the Orange Hall on Monday afternoon, the 1st.
