TAKING OVER MOWAT HOSPITAL GOOD MOVE

Says Premier Ferguson, Who Says Settlement Not Yet Reached.

"No settlement has yet been reached," said Premier G. Howard Ferguson, regarding the Mowat Sanatorium here. "The matter is still in the negotiation stage."

The Prime Minister explained to the Toronto Globe that the government has been considering for some time the taking over of the Mowat Hospital. More accommodation for mental cases is required by the Rockwood Hospital, and the government feels that to make the Mowat institution part of it would be a much cheaper proposition than to construct new accommodation. The Mowat Hospital, which was built in the first place by philanthropic persons, and has been lying practically idle since the close of the war, has been inspected by government officials and found to be in good shape.

"We consider taking it over a good move," said the premier. "Our proposed grants are but a fraction of what new accommodation would cost. But, as I said before, nothing is settled. We're still negotiating. And if we reach an agreement, it will come in a few days now."
