Raincoats of Gay Colour. The old-fashioned rain-coat is no longer the drab, sensible garment of cravenette or rubberized cloth. Proving that necessity is really and truly the mother of invention, the French couturiers, seeing the rain come down every day, got busy and designed some chic wet-weather togs. So now Madame may be smart even though dull days are the general summer menu.

All sorts of materials are being used for the raincoats "de luxe," taffeta, woolen crepe, satin and crepe de chine. They are all made so that the raindrops can't get in. A smart little black taffeta raincoat has the cuffs and collar piped with gold leather and a little gold leather rose adorns the lapel. When worn with a black woolen, one-piece frock with narrow belt in gold leather and black felt hat with gold bands and cocade.

Bright blues, Nile greens, mauve and Alice blues, as well as white are the chosen colors, worn with felt hats to match. One charming pastel-blue raincoat seen at the Chantilly races was worn with a rose-pink scarf and felt hat of the same tone. The smartest raincoats of the season have little capes just reaching to the narrow belt about the hips. Other than this there is nothing to break a straight line.

Paris is showing some delightful rainy-day tailors made of the rubberized crepe satin, taffeta or silk. Naturally they are extremely simple, but impeccable in line having short skirts and hip-length jackets with narrow belts. A lovely one in lilac green is worn with the softest pink blouse and gold color is trimmed in brown.
