THE BEAUTY DOCTOR BY NINON.

Ma Hopkins showing exercise for making the neck shapely.

CONDITION—Too much flesh about the neck and upper shoulders—with possibly a "dowager hump" staking out its claim just across the back.

DIAGNOSIS—You aren't giving this part of you enough exercise to keep it shapely. Perhaps you sit all day over your typewriter in one position. Perhaps you are a bit indolent. At any rate, you need to wear down the fat cells.

TREATMENT—Stand erect with your feet together and your hands at the sides. Relax, and let your head fall as low over your chest as it will, then using your neck as a pivot, describe a circle with your head. Complete this tour about 10 times, changing your course from starboard to port every other time so as not to become dizzy. If you are sufficiently conscientious about this, a swanlike contour will be your reward.

NEWS ABOUT WOMEN

St. Nazaire—The most touching tribute paid to Mrs. Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney during the fete which marked the dedication of her statue of the doughboy was that of the French queen of the fete.

Shortly after the official banquet opened, the French queen suddenly crossed to Mrs. Whitney's table and on behalf of the people of St. Nazaire thanked her for the beauty she had added to the harbor by her conception of the American "crusader." The action was wholly spontaneous.

London—Mounted on a rostrum and surrounded by all kinds of furniture, Mrs. Rose Elizabeth Smethers, one of the smartest of auctioneers in London, conducts regular sales in Wandsworth Road. For nine years she has been conducting auction and although she admits it is hard work she likes it. Mrs. Smethers generally disposes of about 200 lots at her sales and works quickly.

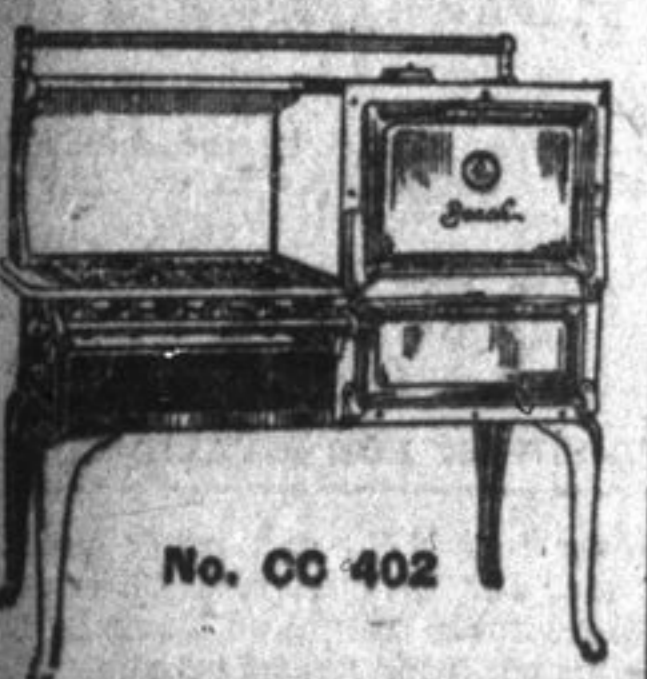

London—Augustus John's portrait of Princess Bibesco painted in her wedding veil has been sold for 1,500 pounds, which is said to be the highest price any living British artist has received for a single portrait, although it falls far short of the price Sargent received in his later days. Princess Bibesco's picture was not sold to a member of the Asquith family, but was bought by a foreign art dealer.

Belgrade—Queen Marie of Yugoslavia has bobbed her hair. But the young and beautiful consort of King Alexander appears to suffer some embarrassment with her clipped tresses when receiving visitors or when giving official receptions. On such occasions she wears a colored silk handkerchief as a head-dress which effectively conceals her shortened locks.

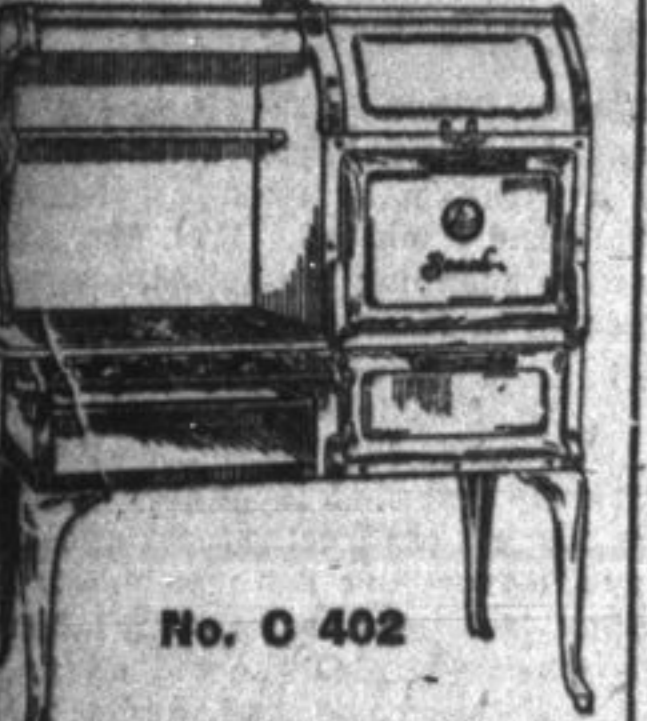

It is said the Queen had her hair bobbed without her husband's knowledge, and that when he discovered it, he gave vent to his Royal wrath. He asked how any Queen could with dignity wear a crown with her hair amputated and her neck shaved. The Queen is said to have insisted that the masculine style of hair dressing was not only in fashion but was comfortable and convenient. All Belgrade society women are now following her example.
