What Does Like.

Farmer's Advocate: There is no doubt regarding the value of sweet clover as a bee pasture. When mowing a crop of sweet clover at Weldwood Farm the field was literally covered with millions of honey bees, and they stayed with the fresh sheaves until the last of them went into the silo. The bees seemed to be doing their best to prevent the destruction of so much valuable nectar.

VISIT TO CENTENARIAN OF VICTORIA COUNTY

Mr. John Flynn Cuning of Oakwood Friend of Mowat and Brown.

To brush the cob-webs from the brain, and add a new interest to life, there is nothing that can compare with a journey to new scenes, and a few days' or weeks' intercourse with new acquaintances. While it may be true, that, "East, west, home's best," yet were one to remain always in the same locality, many an interesting personage would never be heard of, and many a pleasant interview would never be enjoyed, because all had remained in a very circumscribed area, throughout the years.

One of the great privileges of a recent tour was the meeting with Mr. John Flynn Cuning, Oakwood, Victoria county, who, on June 14th last, celebrated his one hundredth birthday. For some sixty-eight years he has been a resident of Mariposa township, which is known far and wide because of the work of the late Mr. Henry Glendinning, the "father of alfalfa clover." This "Grand Old Man of Mariposa," Mr. Cuning, is like Zachaeus, small of stature, yet he is one of the world's big men, as was quite evident during an interview granted the writer upon the occasion of a recent visit to his comfortable home.

Born in London, England, on June 14th, 1826, he came to Canada in 1858, with his wife, and a family of five children. Believing in a Supreme Being who guides the destinies of men, and praying that his steps might be directed of the Lord, he came to Oakwood, to make his home, and has subsequently resided there continuously, confident that it was the spot appointed for him. At the first, the village did not exist, and he has watched it (and the settlement round about) grow, until it is as prosperous a section as one would care to find.

In the homeland, educational advantages were meagre, yet he improved his opportunity, until, at the age of fourteen, he was obliged to absent himself from the school-room, in order to earn his own living. He was an inveterate reader, and resolved to devote a few minutes each day to the improvement of his mind, the result being, that he is—to a large extent—a self-educated man with an intelligent grasp, not only of the questions which engrossed the attention of politicians of an earlier age, but also those that confront the minds of the statesmen of the world today. He believes that the occupant of a high position should be one fit for the job.

He is a typical English gentleman, and, when younger, engaged in tall, oring, also conducting the post office from time out of mind. With a twinkle in his eye, he informs one that he can yet make out a money order, or make your will as well as any one else.

He has ever enjoyed the confidence of his community, being for thirty-five years clerk of the township of Mariposa, and for forty-nine years clerk of the Division court. It was his fertile brain which conceived the idea of a voter's list, and he compiled, for his township, the first voter's list ever published in Canada. Requests for copies of the same coming in from many municipalities.

The late Sir Oliver Mowat counted this venerable gentleman among his friends, and has been entertained in his home at Oakwood. One cannot but notice a striking resemblance which Mr. Cuning bears, to photos of the eminent politician, and indeed one was often mistaken for the other. Sir Oliver used to remark that he did not know which man should feel the more highly complimented. Sir William Mulock, and the Hon. George Brown were also distinguished friends of the subject of this sketch, who was, indeed, offered an important government position, if he would take up his residence in the Provincial Capital. Such honors were politely declined, as he believed it to be in the best interests of his family to be reared in the rural districts, instead of in the urban centres. How like the patriarch, Abraham, for whom the glitter of Sodom had no attractions, but who remained "near to Nature's heart!"

Mr. Cuning is a man of highest ideals; with him, to be religious seems to be as natural as living. He has ever identified himself with the spiritual life of the township, being a local preacher for forty-five years. In the pioneer days, he walked long distances over muddy roads, and accomplished religious enterprises that would stagger most men of the present, in these ease-loving times. Said he, "What we need to-day are gospel sermons, not literary essays. We need men who are called to preach, not 'manufactured' preachers."

On the day previous to his one hundredth birthday, he delivered a short address, in the local church, exhorting his hearers to follow a life of righteousness. On his birthday, Monday, June 14th, there was a great family re-union, five generations being present, beside a host of other descendants and relatives. Of his nine children, four survive; there are seventy-two grandchildren, forty-one great-grandchildren, and four great-great-grandchildren. On the evening of that memorable day, the Women's Institute catered for a great community banquet, when the "Grand Old Man" was guest of honor, addresses being given, and presentations being made, in recognition of this wonderful man who had lived practically his entire life in their midst, and had kept himself above reproach during an entire century

"Let me but do my work, from day to day. In field or forest, at the desk or loom. In roaring market-place, or tranquil room; Let me but find it in my heart to say, When vagrant wishes beckon me astray— This is my work: my blessing, not my doom; Of all who live, I am the one by whom This work can best be done, in the right way. Then shall I see it not too great, nor small. To suit my spirit, and to prove my powers; Then shall I cheerful greet the laboring hours. And cheerful turn, when the long shadows fall At eventide, to play, and love, and rest. Because I know, for me, my work is best." —L. T.

How's That? The installment salesman was visiting the railroad shops. "This man you fellows call 'Slim' Johnson wants a suit of clothes on time payments. Is he honest?" "Mister," answered the foreman, "Slim is one of the squarrest men in the roundhouse."—Good Hardware.
