GAVE FINE TALK TO KIWANIS CLUB

Professor Herbert Heaton of Queen's Spoke on the Coal Situation.

Professor Herbert Heaton was the speaker at the meeting of the Kiwanis Club on Monday at noon at the Frontenac Hotel and he delivered an intensely interesting address on "The Sickness of King Coal" bringing out the fact that there was an abundance of means of obtaining coal but the demand was not as heavy now for it as before the war, due to the revolution in industry caused by the rapid advances made by electricity and oil. The speaker showed in a clear manner what effect these two things had on the coal industry and what changes it had wrought in the coal producing countries of the world.

Professor Heaton stated that the coal industry in Britain was in a bad way due to the tussle between capital and labor. He stated that if it resulted that the coal industry died, not only would it affect the industrial power of the nation but it would affect her navy and her position in the world with respect to other nations. Her whole national power would be affected, the speaker declared. The same could be said for Germany. The coal industry, he said, was not one of the contented industries or prosperous ones at the best. It was hard and dirty work at the best.

The speaker drew a comparison of conditions before the war and since and pointed out the difference in the demand for coal then as compared with the demand for that commodity now. Every industry going up needed coal. These industries grew up and the demand for coal was heavy and the production heavy. England's coal industry was very large and since 1870 Germany too had advanced greatly in the coal industry, combining this industry with steel. Ships went out from England before the war, with coal and brought back other materials needed in the country. There was plenty of coal and the demand was great.

Since the war advances in opposition were made by electricity and oil but in no country had it made such advances in electricity up to that time as France and northern Italy. They came gasoline and oil. The speaker drew attention to the great advance made by the automobile and the aeroplane and showed that these had had their effect on the coal industry.

But during the war the coal industry was extended with the result that now more coal can be provided than there is demand for. The speaker referred to the great ships that were burning oil now instead of coal. It was cheaper and more easily handled and it was cleaner. He cited the case of the Mauretania which was converted from a coal burner to an oil burner with the result that accommodation to the extent of 600 passengers was increased on the boat. Ships now being built were being built as oil burners. This was having its effect on the coal industry.

The speaker took up several other points, showing that since the war the demand for coal had fallen off and other things had taken its place. There was a problem to face there and he stated that it would be a matter of interest to see what would result from it.

A hearty vote of thanks to the speaker was moved by Kiwanian James Halliday and the appreciation of the club was expressed by loud applause. During the luncheon Mr. S. J. Carrier, of Queen's, sang two numbers, "The Wreck of the Julie Plant" being particularly well received.

On motion of Kiwanian Billy Moore, seconded by Kiwanian Frank Anglin, it was decided to accept the invitation of the Mayor of Gananoque to dine with the Canadian Club at Gananoque some time after Labor Day with a view to forming a Kiwanis branch there.
