The Vital Flame A Stirring Serial of Primitive Passions by May Christie

CHAPTER XXXVIII. On the last day but one of Lady Warrington's house-party, Warwick and Miss Leonie Day engaged in a rather intimate, albeit, "canny" conversation.

man can get round a man, more especially if he's already attracted her." Leonie rose up, as though to end the conversation. She smiled down at Tremen, but there was calculation in that smile of hers.

She prides herself on her efficiency. She is as alert in regard to her health as her work, and has learned that time lost through preventable illness is not good business.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS by Olive Roberts Barto

A TRIP TO ENGLAND. The next night when Johnny Jump Up, the garden fairy, awakened the Twins and the three of them had climbed down the rose vine into the magic garden, the little fairy skipped over to a patch of yellow flowers and stopped.

She found herself between her hostess and her fiancée, walking in the clear moonlight towards the studio in the grounds.

There was a light burning in the studio, Miles had worked late, to complete his study. Leonie was doubtless watching him.

"Let's surprise 'em," suggested the kitchen maids, as they stopped before the door. "We won't knock. We'll go right in."

"You thought you were unobserved!" supplemented Lady Warrington archly, coming to the rescue. She adored romance of any kind, and now forgot her previous irritation with Miss Leonie, who really did look sweetly shy and "caught."
