R. J. BUSHELL HELD MEETING

Progressive Candidate Opened His Election Campaign at Odessa.

Mr. R. J. Bushell, Progressive candidate for Frontenac-Addington in the Federal elections in September, opened his campaign at Odessa on Saturday night, and with two other speakers, G. Anson Aylesworth and James Bell, addressed a fairly large audience in the village hall. The three speakers criticized severely the Conservative government, told of the advantages to be gained from the Robb Budget, and Mr. Aylesworth in particular, stayed Premier Meighen roundly, for his action in connection with the dissolution of parliament, through the Governor-General. There was great enthusiasm at the meeting and there was no heckling.

Mr. Henry Smith was chairman, and introduced the different speakers. Mr. James Bell was the first speaker, and in a stirring speech, he declared that the Progressive group was the people's party, while other parties were very partisan, and railed on another about the misdoings that occurred during the government of the one or the other. Mr. Bell stated that much had been heard of the Customs scandal, but he reminded his audience that there were many scandals in the Conservative government, among them the sale of horses by DeWitt Foster and other things.

Mr. Bell took up the question of the decrease in population of the rural sections and of the increase in the urban centres. He pointed out that since 1878, Kingston's population had grown from 17,000 to 24,000 in 1924, while Frontenac in 1878, had a population of 26,000, and in 1921 this had been reduced to 20,000. In addition there was a decline of over one-third the population. In almost every rural riding there had been a decrease in population. Mr. Bell stated that the increase in the machinery in use had nothing to do with that condition either. Machinery had been put into the cities and they had grown while in the rural centres there had been a big drop.

Unusual Trade Policy.
The speaker declared that it was the unusual trade policy that had been the cause of all this since 1878. Mr. Meighen says protection. Mr. Bell said the word was misused. It should be called "the toll and bonus system." All are not treated the same.

The speaker stated that a decrease in population in the rural sections meant that sale of farm lands must be disposed of in a buyers' market. This would be a loss. Fifty-one per cent. of the people of Canada were farmers, and the value of the property is depreciating.

Protection had been introduced in 1878 here, but it had been in force in England before that. Mr. Bell declared that in England there had been rigid protection for land owners and shippers. At that time, English ships were the only ones that could carry cargoes from and into England. There were no colonial ships. The Corn Law was for the land owners. Not till 1846 were the people freed from this bondage, and it was good for the masses. Conditions in England were greatly improved. In 1858 protection on sugar came into effect in Canada, and the Redpath sugar interests made a fortune and are still doing it. Protection, Mr. Bell said, was for the wealthy classes.

Mr. Bell said that seventy-seven per cent. of the automobile money invested in Canada was American capital. A reduction in the price of motor cars, as given by the Robb budget, takes $100 that would go into this American capital, and puts it into the pockets of the Canadian consumers, to do something else with. The rubber industry creates a similar condition now and gives more money to Canadians.

Mr. Bell disagreed with the income tax reductions, in that the incomes of men who have benefited from the country, should not have had their tax reduced. Money is what won elections, the speaker said. Mr. Meighen had declared that protection was entrenched behind ramparts of gold.

In conclusion, Mr. Bell urged his listeners to elect the Progressive candidate, assuring them that their interests would be in good hands.

Mr. G. A. Aylesworth, Mr. Aylesworth, the next speaker, told of the early struggles of the United Empire Loyalists who left the United States for British freedom and to cling to British ideals. Mr. Aylesworth asked if the early struggles of these United Empire Loyalists were to be lost. He asked if it was worth while for them to shed their blood as they did for the sake of the British constitution, and then have a constitutional condition such as has been created by Premier Meighen, brought in. Mr. Aylesworth declared that Mr. Meighen could not say there was no constitutional issue. The speaker reviewed the situation in parliament since October last, and he said certain press that had been muzzled and made to say what the interests demanded they say.

The speaker declared that protection was for the interests and they did not like the common people. He said Mr. Meighen had tried to override the freedom of parliament, and parliament is the people. He has tried to make the people do as he says. Mr. King had obeyed the will of the people.

Mr. Meighen had opposed the reduction of the tariff and reduction of tax. He had opposed the budget and had opposed the reduction on automobiles. Mr. Meighen opposed every move made by parliament, and put that parliament, which is the people, out of the way, and when the Progressives would not bend to him, he acted, not as a Cromwell, but in an underhand way. His party sent out stories that have been exploded.

Mr. Aylesworth took up the question of trade. He stated that if it was not an evil thing to trade freely between Ernestown, Camden, Leeds, Frontenac, Ontario and Quebec, why is it an evil thing to trade between United States and Canada? If we have more wheat than we can use, and another country had more of something else than it could use, and we needed it, why not exchange? A fair exchange, he said, was of benefit to both. Protection was a means of tyranny, the speaker declared.

Mr. Aylesworth pointed out that the Governor-General, Lord Byng, was a soldier, a hero, and a man of honor, and he declared that Mr. Meighen should not be allowed to hide behind him. Since the days of Charles II, the Prime Minister has been responsible for the actions of the King in a public way, and the Prime Minister in Canada is responsible for the action of the Governor-General in Canada. On the shoulders of Meighen was the responsibility for the action against the constitution and for the situation in parliament in the last month.

Mr. R. J. Bushell.

Mr. Bushell was warmly received when called on to speak. He pointed out that the Robb budget had been a great thing for the farmer. He referred to the great reductions made by the budget, and pointed out that the Progressives had supplied these reductions, which made things easier for everybody in Canada. The speaker pointed out that the member for Frontenac had voted against these reductions. Mr. Bushell contended that the people of the county were sick of the misrepresentation that they have had, and he declared that the Progressives, who were getting stronger and stronger, would play a much larger part in the government of the country.

The speaker also pointed out the great advances made by the Canadian National Railways, which showed a balance of thirteen million dollars. Canada's trade balance was the largest of any country in the world. Taking these things into consideration, Mr. Bushell asked if that looked as though the country was "going to the dogs," as the Conservatives would have the people believe.

The speaker urged that the farmers, designated as Progressives, take their stand and have themselves properly represented in parliament.

Mr. Bushell assured the audience that if elected, his work in the House would be for the interests of the people, and he asked that he be returned on election day.

Mr. Bushell was tendered a great ovation as he concluded his short address, and the enthusiasm displayed at the meeting spoke well for the candidate. Mr. Bushell will hold another meeting at Newboro next Saturday night, and it is anticipated that there will be a very large crowd in attendance.

MEIGHEN GOVERNMENT SEVERELY SCORED

Before taking his seat, Mr. Jamieson stated that he was satisfied that the late Minister of Customs did not know that corruption was going on. He stated that it was no trouble for the Conservatives, such as Hon. Stevens, to stir up things.

Mr. Aylesworth opened his discourse by complimenting the president on his excellent talk, and also stressed the necessity of proper organization, especially in this riding, which is 110 miles long, by 60 wide. "If we allow Dr. Edwards to be elected without opposition, it means that we are satisfied that Meighen and his government should control this country," Mr. Aylesworth stated that he did not believe in what Mr. Meighen had been doing since last October. While Mackenzie King and his government did their utmost to put good legislation on the books, Mr. Meighen and his followers did everything in their power to obstruct and stop the work of the government elected by the people.

Mr. Aylesworth stated that he did not always believe it, but he was now satisfied that the party system is the best, and did not believe in the suggestion of Agnes MacPhail, who thought the business of the country could be carried on by committee. This might be alright, if the representatives were elected each year, in the county council.

Mr. Aylesworth said that Mr. Meighen set his face, and stopped the progress of the government. Dealing with the Robb tariff, Mr. Aylesworth referred to the reduction in postage, and stated that this reduction, which was a great benefit to all, had been opposed by the government, of which Hon. Dr. Edwards was a member.

The speaker said that if the Meighen government is elected, they will put a chain of protection around this country, and would probably put the tariff a little higher on automobiles, and would also increase the income tax, which the King government reduced to the betterment of all classes.

In closing Mr. Aylesworth stated that he did not agree with the Progressive platform in full, but if we wait until we get all we want, how long will we go unrepresented?

The meeting was brought to a close with the singing of the National Anthem.
