The Vital Flame A Stirring Serial of Primitive Passions by May Christie

CHAPTER XIV. A queer buzzing sound greeted her. And then a woman's voice, sharp and frightened. "Is that Miss Field? Quick. . . for God's sake. . ."

"Listen. There's not a moment to lose. You're in danger. Awful danger! He's broken free—and—and—he's after you! He's got a knife with him—"

"What I don't understand. Tell me!" "Jose. The cops got him when he landed. He was sent up. He swears he'll do you in for it. He's broke loose. D'you hear me?"

"I don't understand. There's a mistake. "You're the sculptor man's young lady, ain't you? That's the one that Jose's after. That you. He says he told you at the time that he doesn't care if he has to swing for it, he'll get you, and he means it. An hour ago, and more, he went to find you. Listen. There's not a moment to lose. . ."

phone the police! Quick!" A buzzing sound was the only answer. "Operator! The Police! Hurry!" Frantically she jerked the hook. Then the woman's voice again: "Oh say, they cut 'us off! I've been an hour trying to get you! I guess the lightning put the line out of order. Say, listen! I'll ring off, and you call up the police headquarters. Get protection! Quick! You were good to me once, and I'm not the one to forget a kindness. But Jose—he'll kill you—he must be nearly there by now—"

"Where are you ringing from?" Breathed Marcella. "New York. A call-office." "Then will you—" suddenly there was a click as though the wire had snapped! And at the same instant, Marcella heard a step on the verandah. Out in the darkness, someone. . . Good God! . . . someone had tampered with the wires!

She had done nothing. . . nothing to antagonize him! There was some horrible error. He had mistaken her for someone else. "Shot full of dope," was he? And sworn that he would kill her? And she was alone. . . utterly alone. . . foot that she was.

Tired, nervous mothers are the direct cause of much unhappiness in our homes; their condition irritates and wears upon the husband and often ruins a child's disposition. This condition of the mother is often due to some weakness which makes her entirely unfit to perform her household duties and bear the strain upon her nerves that governing children involves. Every woman who finds herself in this condition should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and lose no time in giving it a fair trial.

the creeping horror coming nearer. . . nearer. . . The lamp on the table flared up suddenly, preparatory to going out. She had forgotten that it needed paraffin. . . too late now. . . God! In that last flare of the lamp before it died, she saw—pressed close against the window-pane—a wild and evil face, the mouth grinning and twisted, the eyes glaring maniacally at her.

"At last! I've got you!" (To Be Continued)

Cedar Shingles

The Wooden Cedar Shingle is still the leading Roofing material, furnishing more weather protection for the money than any other roofing. It keeps out heat and cold and will remain sound and waterproof for a long period of years.

The clear Shingle we offer to-day is made of the very best cedar that the logs produce.

BRUIN GOT AWAY. Plevna, Aug. 23. — One of the many tourists patronizing the resort at Sand Lake had a very exciting experience with a bear, which he endeavored to capture while it was swimming in the lake. He first tried to shoot it with a revolver, which refused to go off, and then put in a strenuous half-hour trying to drown it, but finally Bruno reached the shore and made his escape. Mr. Moran, Toronto, and J. H. McClaren, Perth, spent the latter part of this week tuning and repairing pianos in this district. Among those leaving for the Western Provinces Wednesday were Mrs. Allan Card and daughter, Marguerite and Winnifred, and Messrs. M. and R. Gansinger and A. Lemke. The young people enjoyed a dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Lemke on Thursday night. Mr. and Mrs. G. Ostler, Russell
