PORTSMOUTH CONVICTS.

I saw them march
In white and blue,
As I walked down
The avenue:
And in my heart
Great pity came
For those who bear
A convict's name.

Lo, I was free,
And friends were mine—
Their's the labor,
Without a sign
Of sympathy
Or kind intent,
Disgrace and pain!

To them were lent:
Hopesless, cheerless,
Sullen, dull,
Marching silent,
—Ever full
Of memories

That sere the mind:
Loveless orders
From behind
Breaking silence,
Grim and still,
As they solemn
Mount the hill.

Had Fate caught them
Dark and stern,
Placed them here
That they should learn
All the folly
Of their trend,
And how sinning
Ere must end?

Yet, methought,
What hosts there be
In this land
Who saunter free
Brazenly

In clearest light,
Sinning souls
As black as night,
Crushing life
For love of gain
Who're not clanking
Of the chain
Follows them
(But are they free,
Haunted by Low Memory?)
Lives they've driven
To despair,
Loves they've broken,
Skulking there;
Peering, cursing,
Through the gloom,
In the silence
Of a room;
More condemning,
Full of pain
Than the clanking
Of the chain.

Who for self-love,
Silly-wise,
Other lives
Will sacrifice,
May not live
Where convicts dwell,
But he waits
A deeper hell.

NOT TO RAISE ANY MORE MONEY

ney on hand, which could be used for roads, be all spent on the piece of road north of Verona on the county highway.

Councillor Freeman declared that the resolution was out of order because only the Good Roads Committee could say where the money allotted to roads was to be spent.

Says "Petty Politics"
"I won't vote for any money unless I know where it is to be spent," said Councillor Drew.

"I think it should be considered whether or not the motion is out of order" declared Councillor Kennedy. He deprecated what he termed "petty politics" in the County Council and he advised strongly against cutting the tax rate too low. The load then fell on the council which came after, he said.

Councillor Jamieson said that he did not wonder if the representatives of the northern townships objecting to paying the interest on the money borrowed for roads, but he had always considered it proper that when a person had a franchise he had to pay something. The part of the interest was all the representatives from the north paid, but they had an equal vote with the other members of the council as to what the rate should be.

He didn't feel that it would be of any use to raise a loan this year, but he believed that the rate next year would have to be seven or eight mills to make up for the very low rate this year.

Councillor Sibbitt supported both the pooling system and the six mill rate which the Good Roads Committee had recommended.

Councillor Drew asked how much had been spent on the Verona Road this year, but Mr. Sibbitt told him he was not prepared to answer the question. He did believe, however, that the committee was conscientious and were trying to distribute the money to the best advantage.

Councillor Aylesworth said it would be a good thing to call another special meeting if the council could gain another $1,000 by doing it. He also remarked that the real reason the committee did not buy the air compressor drill was because the committee and the dealers could not agree on a price.

Verona Road.
The Verona Road which was discussed at some length during the meeting, was explained by Mr. Fair when he said that Mr. Freeman had been confident that he would get special assistance with that piece of road from the province, and so nothing had been put down for it in the estimate. The special assistance was not forthcoming, however.

Councillor Jamieson declared that when the detailed statement as prepared by Mr. Fair showed that there was money on hand and that it was not necessary to call a special meeting to discuss raising more money, he thought the Warden should have got the detailed statement first, before he decided to call a special meeting and he would then have seen that it was unnecessary.

The motion of Councillors Cronk and Drew, that all the money left on hand be spent on the Verona Road was again read by the Warden, but Mr. Jamieson objected that it was out of order and it was allowed to drop.

Councillor Sibbitt called the attention of the councillors to the fact that the meeting had been called to discuss ways and means of raising additional money and that all other matters were irrelevant.

Councillors Barr and McGregor then moved that no action be taken to raise additional funds and the motion carried. Council then adjourned.
