JUST A GLIMPSE

By L. M. England.

The country of whir and stir and radios and all new notions takes the eye of a visitor to Uncle Sam's dominions. These are more familiar to frequent travelers, than to the occasional, but to both alike the little groups of Canadians one meets are most interesting. Their success, their disappointments, their ways of contrast between the north and the south of line 45, is striking.

On the way to New York City, the Waterbury Standard had no word from Canada at all, and the elections just over. The Syracuse Herald did give Canada a little place on the map and the recent excitement and prospective political results were noted to some extent. And rightly so for Canadians scattered about over here do not forget their native land though absent for a longer or a shorter time.

"What have you been doing up home?" said an Ontarian of some years here. "You had an election not long since and just now another one."

And the reply had to be given. "We are more of party politicians in the houses of parliament than you are. When a government is defeated and we haven't brains enough to talk the matter out we go to the country and fight it out."

"My!" was the reply. "It would bankrupt us to have two elections in one year. Once in four is all we can stand. You gave Byrnes a black eye, didn't you, on the so called constitutional question?"

"Oh, no, generally the blame is put on Mr. Meighen for his over optimism, but of course Britain's big daughter is growing more and more independent."

"What about the Kingston Whig?" was asked. "I knew Mr. Penze, years ago editor. The sample copies of recent election issues were pretty nasty. The present editor was evidently on the job."

"Yes," I replied, "the Editor put up a splendid fight."

"How is Dr. Edwards?" asked another. "I always thought him a pretty square man though we were on different sides once in politics. I would have voted for him anyway in this election. I think he is needed in Ottawa. They used to call him 'volcanic' but volcanoes are needed and though he is an Orangeman I see the late Mr. Bolvin was head of the Knights of Columbus. It will be a fine day when mutual friendliness come to these societies. Tariff and reciprocity are better subjects of discussion."

"But," said another, "why not blot out the customs line altogether. Between our States and between your Provinces there are no customs houses but absolute free trade. It would work well between our two countries if we do not yet want to be one."

One interesting feature of the great city of New York is the frequent faces of colored people. They are very much at home this far north and are welcome without distinction in all conveyances. This is quite in line with a recent sympathetic editorial in the Whig, which all interested in the color line discussions were glad to read. One fine colored man said he knew the late Booker Washington and saw the fuss that was caused when Roosevelt entertained him at the Whitehouse.

All tourists gravitate to the Woolworth building, the highest skyscraper here, 54 storeys of offices and a high tower above for a look out over the smoke belouuded city. A deep haze covers the city even when the sky is clear. It is providential that the wind blows, and hard too, at times to fan away the fumes and vitiated air of streets and lanes. From this tower, cringing at the vision from such a height, built up by a little mite of the profits of 5-10-15 cent purchases in a continent wide industry, one looks down on the wee-looking street runways and on what seem to be toy vehicles and midget people, like ants, on the run.

Butter and Cheese Export.

In the twelve months ending with the sixth month of the present year, according to the Dominion Dairy News Letter, Canada's export of butter decreased close upon two and a half million pounds compared with the previous year's returns, but a cent and a half per pound increase in price to some extent counterbalanced the deficit. On the other hand the total export of cheese increased by over twelve million pounds and by almost three cents a pound in price.

KINGSTON WAS HIT BY A LIVELY STORM

Trees Stripped of Branches But No Serious Damage Was Reported.

Kingston was hit by a lively storm in the early hours of Friday morning. Trees were stripped of their branches in many parts of the city, but there was no serious damage reported in the city or the surrounding country.

Many farmers reported that a large amount of their grain which was stacked in the field, was damaged by the storm. In one or two places buildings were slightly damaged, but not to any great extent. The rain came down in torrents and the wind swished it along.

The storm lasted for about three hours, and then quietened down to a mild shower.
