A SHELTER NEEDED FOR WAYWARD GIRLS

Matter Discussed by Children's Aid Society—Wards Number Over 100.

Despite the very inclement weather representative meeting of the Kingston-Frontenac Children's Aid Society was held in the Court House on Tuesday afternoon. Dr. A. P. Chown, the president, was in the chair.

Aid T. A. Kidd presented an interesting financial report covering the period since June. The trust fund is growing nicely. It is made up of sums paid to the credit of wards of the society who are in foster homes. Each child has a trust fund to which these sums are credited and which accumulates till they marry or come of age, or otherwise leave the custody of the society. Mr. Kidd stressed the necessity of a larger income for the current expenses of the society as there is a present over-draft in this account.

Mr. Black gave an interesting account of his visit to all the wards of the Society. Over one hundred in number, in various places through the county. During the summer, four children were adopted into real homes, and several cases are still pending. Three children, because of cruelty, were removed from their homes and placed in foster homes.

The question of wayward girls was discussed. At present when a girl sentence is served and the girl has no home to which to go, a serious problem develops. The need of some shelter for these cases was emphasized.

The good work of Miss Laura Nelsh in supervising the outfits for small babies, for whom no preparation had been made before their birth, was referred to. Much help has been derived from Miss Nelsh's careful work. Mrs. R. H. Fair and Mrs. A. Clark discussed the problems presented and the meeting then adjourned.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barto

Open Your Mouth and Shut Your Eyes.

"Please gimme three cents worth of honey—no, gimme ten cents worth," said Johnny Bear as he waddled into the funny little store in the woods.

"Certainly," said Mister Bags. "You get it for him, Nancy, I'm busy."

Nancy got a big spoon and went to the big jar where the honey was kept and took off the lid. The kind of honey that Mister Bags sold didn't come in neat wooden boxes. He had to dig it out of trees and so he kept it the best way he could.

"Did you bring anything to carry it home in?" asked Nancy.

"Tee, hee, hee!" giggled Johnny Bear. "Of course I did. Here it is. Jus', put it in."

And he opened his mouth as wide as he could, showing all his teeth and his little bright red tongue.

"Oh, all right," laughed Nancy, hopping up on a stool. "Come real close now. Open your mouth and shut your eyes and I'll give you something to make you wise."

So Johnny came as close as he could get, and shut his eyes hard and opened his mouth even wider than ever, and Nancy took a big spoon and dropped ten cents worth of delicious honey right down his throat.

"M-m-m! Gim-m. Gib-b! Gip-p-p!" went Johnny rolling his eyes. "That was positively the sweetest honey I ever ate. Will you please gimme another ten cents worth."

"Certainly!" said Nancy obligingly, hopping down and measuring out the exact amount. "Here you are."

Just then Mrs. Bear came in. "Why, what are you doing here, Johnny Bear?" she said sharply. "Get right down off that stool. Why, I declare, you're all sticky. You've been eating honey," she said suspiciously. "Where did you get it?"

"Mister Bags gave it to me," said Johnny happily.

"Gave it?" cried Mister Bags. "I did no such thing, Johnny Bear. I sold it to you. I sold you twenty cents worth."

"Where did you get twenty cents, Johnny Bear?" screamed Mrs. Bear. "I never gave it to you and you haven't a cent in your bank. Let me see your twenty cents, young man, right this minute."

"Why I haven't any money, mamma," said Johnny. "I haven't got a cent. I just come in and said to Mister Bags, 'Please give me ten cents worth of honey,' and he said, 'Certainly.' And after while I said to Nancy, 'Please gimme another ten cents worth,' and she said, 'Certainly.' They gave it to me, you see. Don't you think they were kind?"

Mister Bags sputtered until he could hardly get his breath. "After this I'll do like the Peman did with Simple Simon. I'll say, 'Show me first your penny!'"

"Johnny didn't need any honey to make him wise," laughed Nancy. "He was wiser than we were to begin with."

"I don't know what you're all talking about," said Johnny crossly. "Will you please give me another ten cents worth of honey, Mister Bags?"

"No, sir!" shouted the fairyman. "I will not."

DRIVER IN A SMASH BUT DID NOT STOP

A. Smeathers and Son, Odessa, Had Close Call on the York Road.

A. Smeathers, baker and his son, of Odessa, had a miraculous escape from being seriously injured and perhaps killed on Monday evening. They were driving in a car on the York Road, west of Odessa, when a car travelling from Kingston, at a fast rate of speed crashed into their car. Smeathers and his son were thrown about the car, which was put into the ditch. The other car, so it is stated, continued on its way without stopping.

Mr. Smeathers, Sr., had his right arm in a sling, as he had the member broken three weeks ago, while engaged in cranking a car. The car the Smeathers were riding in suffered considerable damage. One of the front wheels was smashed, and one of the tires was ripped off. Mr. Smeathers, Jr., was driving the car. The lights on the car were put out of business as a result of the collision and the occupants were left on the roadway in the dark.

Mr. Smeathers and his son noticed the car coming towards them and they state that it had but one headlight burning. In order to avoid an accident, they kept to the right side of the road. Both suffered a severe shaking up, but escaped serious injuries.

OBITUARY

Rev. John M. Macalister.

On Thursday afternoon, there will be laid to rest in Cataragui cemetery, the mortal remains of the late Rev. John M. Macalister, formerly of Kingston, who died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. U. N. Macdonnell, Winnipeg, on Saturday, Oct. 2nd. In August the body of his wife was brought from Winnipeg for burial at Cataragui, and now that of the aged husband will be placed beside it in the Macalister family plot. Thus death did not long divide them.

Mr. Macalister was born in Picton on Oct. 19th, 1845, the son of Alexander Macalister who for years was a member of the Customs House staff in Kingston. The son was educated in the old preparatory school, and entered Queen's College in 1862, graduating as bachelor of arts in 1865. Mr. Macalister saw Fenian Raid military service in 1866. He taught high school for some years in the province of Quebec. Eventually he studied theology in the Presbyterian College, Montreal and for forty years after graduation served the Presbyterian congregations of Ashton, Iroquois and Russelltown. An old college comrade describes Mr. Macalister as being an accurate scholar and a faithful and instructive pastor. Upon retiring from the active ministry, Mr. Macalister came to Kingston with his wife and resided at 331 Barrie street. The worthy old couple became leading workers in Chalmers Church, Mr. Macalister being clerk of the session for about ten years. Last year they removed to Winnipeg to reside with their daughter, and there entered into rest within two months of each other.

The surviving children are: Alexander, member of the Civil Service Commission, Quebec; Norman, head of the immigration and colonization department of the Canadian Pacific Railway, Montreal; James of Grand Forks, North Dakota; Mrs. Macdonnell, dean of women, Manitoba University, Winnipeg, and Mrs. (Rev.) A. D. Corbett, Owen Sound.

The burial service at Cataragui cemetery will be conducted by Rev. George A. Brown, of Chalmers church.

PICTURES ARE HUNG IN DOUGLAS LIBRARY

The Collection is Valuable From Historical Point of View.

The collection of portraits and views relating to Canada, which was gathered by Senator Andrew Hayden and Dr. Adam Shortt, of Ottawa, and presented to Queen's University about three years ago when the Queen's library was moved into the Douglas Library Building, is being hung in the corridors of the building.

There are several hundred pictures in the collection, and they have been suitably framed, and many of them during the past week have been placed on the walls. From a historical point of view the collection is a very valuable one, for it comprises portraits of many men who have taken a distinguished part in Canada's growth as well as views of Ottawa and other Canadian cities drawn when they were struggling villages. Men in England and other countries, who were indirectly associated with Canada, such as Gladstone and Peel, are included in the collection and in many cases a specimen of the man's handwriting or his signature is framed with the portrait. The hanging of the pictures has provided Queen's students and the public generally with a very valuable source of pictorial history.
